ELLIOTT REFUSES TO YIELD, MORGAN QUITS

stock dividends that were not earned. The breach was widened when Mr. Elliott, after the New Haven wreck last Tuesday, declared for a policy of frank publicity.

But it was Mr. Elliott's strictures upon the financial policy of the Morgans that most hurt J. P. Morgan. After saying that the New Haven road had failed by $4,600,000 to earn the dividends paid during the last fiscal year Mr. Elliott said bluntly:

"Dividends must be earned before they are paid."

Comes to a Climax.

After that ultimatum Mr. Morgan, it is said, called upon Mr. Elliott at the Hotel Belmont. The financier plainly let Mr. Elliott know that if the house of Morgan was not to be trusted to handle the road's finances the New Haven system might expect the Morgans to pull their support away.

After the conference the strained relations between the two men became more tense. It all came to a climax when the house of Morgan sent this letter to a conference of New Haven executives:

President New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, New Haven, Ct.:

Dear Sir—In the existing fiscal agency agreement between ourselves and your company, it is provided that the arrangement shall continue until the close of ninety days after either party shall have given written notice to the other of a desire to terminate the same.

We hereby notify you that it is our desire that the arrangement be terminated upon the lapse of ninety days from this date, or at such earlier date as shall be agreeable to you.

Yours very truly,

J. P. MORGAN & CO.

As the executives left the conference room their countenances were strained. Mr. Morgan rushed by the newspaper men, who asked him about the withdrawal of his firm.

"Nothing to say," he snapped. "Ask Mr. Elliott."

"Public First," Says Elliott.

Mr. Rockefeller gritted his teeth. "Mr. Elliott can do the talking," he retorted as he passed briskly to the elevator.

Mr. Elliott was found in his office in his shirt sleeves. His face was pale and he plainly showed he was laboring under stress.

"Mr. Morgan had his own reasons for withdrawing," he said. "I won't talk. There was no quarrel."

"Mr. Morgan is reported to be out of step with the policy of running the road," was ventured.

Mr. Elliott gave a faint smile.

"I'm only trying to lay down a policy that will serve the public and our stockholders as well—but the public first," he said.

Asked what banking firm will succeed Mr. Morgan, Mr. Elliott replied that inasmuch as the Morgan withdrawal was new, there had been no opportunity of thinking it over.

The fact that the Morgan firm last June entered into a contract with the New Haven to finance the new $67,000,000 debenture bond issue to take up the floating indebtedness of the road leaves about an embarrassing situation for President Elliott.

When the contract was entered into it was agreed that the Morgans should be allowed 2½ per cent. on the sale of stock as their commission.

This allowance instantly raised a storm of disapproval among the stockholders. It aroused insurgent sleeping at a stockholders' conference in New Haven early last month. Morgan G. Bulkley of Hartford, representing dissenting stockholders, bitterly assailed the New Haven management for making the bargain.

The Morgan plan was put through, however, by a big vote and it was stated the Morgans were financing the bond issue. But a hail was called on that the Morgans, with their allies in the New Haven directorate, could pick out a successor to Charles S. Mellen, whom the Morgans had forced to quit as president.

Fights for Sound Basis.

The crisis that now faces Mr. Elliott is one in which "the skids have been placed under him" by the self-same clique that pushed him into power.

Mr. Elliott showed by his attitude that, although depressed over the sudden turn, he intended to follow his own policy to the end.

In doing it he may use his influence to abrogate the Morgan contract for the huge bond issue.

Coming from the West, as president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, where J. P. Morgan, Sr., put him, Mr. Elliott is a fighter. He intends, so he said yesterday, to put the New Haven road "upon a sound basis, with unrestrained publicity as the guiding star."

Mr. Elliott caused to be dug up a resolution passed by the New Haven directors on October 17, when it was ordered that a complete system of danger signals be installed and that in future none but steel cars be built for the road. It insisted that it be enforced to the letter.

Demands Cash for Safety.

Banging the table, he declared no word of $365,000 at once to equip the danger signal system. Meekly the directors voted it.

"The signal system will be pushed and we will build steel cars as fast as the factories can turn them out," said Mr. Elliott later.

Already 211 steel cars have been built, Mr. Elliott said, and orders for fifty more have been turned in since the wreck.

MILLER DID WORK OF 2 MEN FOR WEEK BEFORE THE WRECK

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 6.—The joint investigation of the North Haven wreck by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the State Public Utilities Commission was concluded shortly before noon today.

The principal witnesses were Engineer Miller of the White Mountain train and General Manager Bardo of the New Haven.

Miller, recalled from yesterday's session, testified that for a week preceding the wreck, he had been doing the work of two men.

General Manager Bardo said his first knowledge of criticism of block signals was from the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission last February. He took the matter up with Elliott, emphasizing the necessity of care and warning them to take no chances, regardless of time schedules.

Correspondence from the engineers' committee was taken up with Mr. Bardo, and it was brought out that the engineers had objected to the signal system between New Haven and Spring Hill, Hackettown, N. J., and Dunbury, Ct., Vernon and Boston and Hartford and Danbury.

Mr. Bardo knew nothing of any cancelling of orders for steel cars, and said the Pullman company was delivering about twelve new steel cars a month since the first of January. In the next few months more than twelve a month would be delivered. The New Haven is buying new steel cars, including six new "club cars," which are to be chartered by some clubs of wealthy citizens in Greenwich, Stamford and that vicinity.

Mr. Bardo then produced extracts from the meeting from the board of directors of the New Haven Road, October 17, 1912, at which resolutions were adopted, as a result of the Westport wreck, for a searching investigation as to the competency of engineers and other steps ordered for greater safety in the operation of the railroads.

Mr. Bardo concluded his testimony by a list of expenditures by the road since September, 1911, all for the safety of passenger travel. The total amount was $85,926,500, of which over $360,000 was for automatic signals and over $6,000,000 for steel cars.

Giver of Blood Sues Surgeon for $5,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Charles J. Lichtmaker, who allowed Dr. Martin Belding, of No. 132 East Sixtieth street, to transfuse blood from his arm to the body of Mrs. Benjamin Greenbaum, of No. 587 West One Hundred and Sixty-first street, has sued the doctor for $5,000 damages. He charges that the physician was negligent in preparing the surgical instruments and, as a result, he contracted blood poisoning.

Robber Foiled, Attacks Girl

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Sept. 6.—The police are seeking a man who was given lodging at the station here, and who later, it is believed, brutally attacked Bertha Pigeon, the sixteen-year-old daughter of former Mayor Pigeon, in an attempt to rob her father's desk.

Miss Pigeon put up a brave fight to frustrate him, but was dealt a blow on the head and knocked senseless.

Margaret Wilson to Assist Sister

CORNISH, N. H., Sept. 6.—Not only has Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, decided to assist her sister, Eleanor, at the masque play to be given in the Bird Sanctuary, Meriden, Friday, but she has agreed to render a solo. The selection will be "The Hermit Thrush."

Inspect Dairies in State Contest

The State Board of Agriculture has sent out through the Eastern section of the State, inspectors to look over the dairies of forty participants in the clean dairy contest for which a series of prizes are being offered by the board. Entries for this contest in the section of the State east of Worcester County ended August 30. A similar contest for the western section of the State is to close on September 30. The inspectors will early in October be sent into that section.

Give Stock Rights to Light Concerns

The State Gas and Electric Lighting Commission today issued orders authorizing the United Electric Lighting Company of Springfield to issue 2,500 shares of new stock at $200 a share; the Arlington Gas Lighting Company to issue 250 shares at $100 a share, and the Plymouth Lighting Company to issue 600 shares at $100 a share.

Tennessee Man Sleeps 35 Days

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 6.—Wright Keeble, a visitor here from Tennessee, has been asleep for thirty-five days at the home of his uncle, R. P. Keeble, and many doctors have tried to awaken him. Keeble was missing August 1 and after a search he was found sleeping, with boards for covers, between bales of hay on his uncle's ranch.

Grand Duke Signs as 'Mr. Alexander'

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, having left Newport most reluctantly, is at the Ritz here. He registered as Mr. Alexander, but he is in the hotel's royal suite, which is very gorgeous, and for which it is wagered, the easy-going Grand Duke does not give a kopek.

Stung by Critics, Explains Wild Times

State Attorney Ailing Explains His Charges Against Trainmen.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 6.—State Attorney Ailing, stirred by the storm of indignation that has burst about him, today explained his "wild time" charges against train crews on the Springfield division of the New Haven road on the morning of the New Haven wreck. He said:

"Would not you call it a 'wild time' if the engineer of a train traveling through the fog had whistled twice to go ahead instead of four times to call in the flagman at Wilson's station, and proceeding immediately without waiting for his flagman had been surprised to find the same flagman on his train at Meriden and again at North Haven.

"Wouldn't you call it a 'wild time' if Engineer Miller had passed over two torpedoes at Meriden and instead of slowing down had continued at a speed of fifty miles on the presumption that the torpedoes had been placed on the southbound track by the crew of a northbound freight train that he passed?

"Wouldn't you call it a 'wild time' if Miller's fireman, looking back for the flagman and failing to see him or any sign of a Coston signal, had deliberately lighted a Coston signal and thrown it out of the cab window?

"I could go on and give other instances. All these facts are in the testimony and will be brought out at the proper time."

Professor Orr, Theologian, Dead

GLASGOW, Scotland, Sept. 6.—Professor James Orr, sixty-nine, one of the best known writers on theological topics in the world, died here today. In 1895 he visited America and delivered a series of lectures on German theology in Chicago and other cities.

Kill Over 400,000 Pittsfield Flies

PITTSFIELD, Sept. 6.—"If there is one occasion when no mercy should be shown, it is in the case of killing flies," said Dr. J. A. F. Adams, president of the Anti-Tuberculosis society, to the thirteen children who won prizes in the fly contest just ended. They had swatted more than 400,000 flies out of existence.

Find Love Notes of Queen Victoria

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Queen Mary is collecting personal belongings and souvenirs of Queen Victoria. She has found a most interesting diary which Victoria kept when a girl, also some charming love letters from the Prince Consort, which will be kept from the public eye.

Teacher, a Mother, Is Back in School

Mrs. Edgell, Who Evoked Discussion, Keeps Chicago Job.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Katherine C. Edgell, the Evanston Hill High School teacher, who absented herself from her desk last May to become the mother of a thriving son, is back on her job as instructor, apparently a victor in the country-wide discussion she precipitated. Eminent school authorities took sides with bitter feeling on the question whether school boards should be compelled to allow a woman teacher leave of absence to have a baby.

Some of the participants said having a child mutilated her for her duties as a teacher; others that motherhood be permanently relieved from teaching.

Postmark Clew to Reading Mother

Fear Woman Lodging House Suicide in Hub After Note.

The Boston police believe that Mrs. Viola Winters of Elm street, North Reading, missing since September 2, may have ended her life in a Boston lodging house. The sole clew to the woman's whereabouts is a Boston postmark on a letter sent to her husband, Arthur Winters.

Although his wife disappeared after taking her two sons, Arthur and Henry, aged four and two years, respectively, to the home of her sister, Mrs. Louise Byron of Lynnfield street, Peabody, Mr. Winters does not believe she wrote the letter he received in a strange handwriting threatening suicide.

Mexico to Reject U. S. Mediation

PARIS, Sept. 6.—Intervention by the United States in Mexico, either directly or indirectly, will not be tolerated, according to Senor De La Barra, Mexican Minister to France. In an interview today he said all Mexicans deeply resent outside interference, and would politely reject any proposals from the United States. Mexico, he said, is fully able to settle her own domestic troubles.

Hunt Accomplice in R. I. Jewel Thefts

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 6.—Pinkerton detectives, representing the Adams Express Company, are searching for an accomplice of F. M. Sullivan, under arrest, charged with stealing several thousand dollars worth of jewels. According to the police, Sullivan has confessed.

Was Evelyn Thaw Worth Saving?

Was Evelyn Thaw worth saving?

"No," says Gertrude Atherton, novelist, "White was worth a dozen Evelyn Thaws."

"Yes," say scores of writers who have sent in their indignant protests against the statement of Mrs. Atherton. Here are a few of these protests:

White "Perverted Genius."

Dr. Mabel Witham of Jamaica Plain:

Mrs. Atherton tells us White was a genius and was a source to the community. He chose his victims from young sons and stained their lives with his own black life. Why should we be told that we can forgive him because he has some artistic gifts that the world needs, and the souls that he has shattered can be thrown aside in a heap to satisfy men of his peculiar type. Every life is more or less precious.

It is often such men as White that drag this world down to a mean level. With their talents, they might have set the adding moral flats to their genius, but no; they allow it to be tainted and thus hope to glory in their genius.

Evelyn Thaw's life was well worth saving. Spare such a life and free it from the shackles of any perverted genius.

Condemns White.

Dr. Fred Harry Gile:

I noticed your editorial last night on Mrs. Atherton's decision of Stanford White, with the most complete approval. I was enraged at Mrs. Atherton's statement. But I have been equally amazed, disgusted and and angered at the tone of the newspapers in speaking of White as "the man of genius," "of international fame," "whose genius is stamped on many of the finest buildings in America," etc., etc., ad nauseam.

They didn't tell the young people that he used his great genius, standing and resources to win the trust of little girls and their mothers and then rifled them systematically and persistently, the last feat at fifty years of age, he ruined ONE little girl is enough to condemn him, but the fact that he decoyed thereof and the scientific fiend, and perhaps him as one of the silliest types that ever crawled out of the darks of hell to sting and destroy, and to cover this fact up is to encourage the most terrible evil among us. And it does exist among us, although our State officials deny it. The Federal authorities have had no trouble in finding some of the understrappers of this organized traffic in Massachusetts and doubtless all of us know some who are engaged in it.

The men or women who deliberately foster their own passions instead of controlling them soon become lifeheons or Whites, insane cunningly often things far below the beasts. And our newspapers, by even silently and by implication encouraging this crime, are moral accessories.

Let us have no more of it. Leave White in his dishonored grave, or if he must be mentioned in connection with Thaw, don't use him as a bright and shining contrast to the man who, whatever his faults, tried to do the manly thing by Evelyn at least.

Woman's Task Harder.

May Irony Newman:

If there were no men to offend, there would be no women to drag to the mire.

It is usually a woman who is beguiled and dragged down, and more often it is more difficult for her to keep up than it is for a man who has fallen into the slough of contempt.

"White a Monster."

William J. Mellegnodis:

When White drew his last breath the world was rid of a terrible monster. He employed his genius to ruin the lives of young girls. There are no words strong enough to condemn Mrs. Atherton's views.

Scores Mrs. Atherton.

I am a constant reader of your paper and I would very much like to have a look at the woman (?) that makes the statement that if White ruined the lives of ten women like Evelyn Thaw the world would be not nothing, and when she says the girl was only made to be ruined she must think that God made a certain number of women to be the plaything of our geniuses. I think Gerty must be just like the woman Robert Burns had in mind when he wrote "An Address to the Deil. Dear Good." Perhaps she's no temptation.

LOWELL READER.

"Unwomanly Remarks."

Mrs. Atherton's brutal and unwomanly remarks in today's AMERICAN should be resented by every parent, every right-minded person. Let us hope no young girl, no tender and susceptible child of fifteen, has been given to her tender mercies to be perhaps lessoned some man who has an ill hour to while away. Even were the possessed of the genius Mrs. Atherton utters so highly, most of us would hesitate before subjecting our little girls, our children, to such a fate. Genius at such a cost would be damned.

MRS. WELLINGTON, Boston.

Suggest Sermon on it.

I am a daily reader of the AMERICAN, and seeing that piece all the way across your paper, so big and plain, written by Gertrude Atherton, 1, being a mother, can't understand what kind of a woman that could be to send such a thought as she expresses in it to the public. There is a good subject for some of the clergy to take for a sermon. Was there ever any one born that was not worth saving? If Evelyn Thaw had had good influence when a child she might have been a better woman, or a heart a wiser one. Now, I am not an educated woman or an able writer, but just an everyday woman, and think there is so much bad and so much good in everyone, and it is the influence that is brought to bear on them at a certain time in life that turns them either way. Now will some of the good people that read your paper please say what they think and tell me if I am right in trying to put down such an inhuman and such an unwomanly feeling as that toward my own sex. Dear sir, if you think this worth printing, print it. If not, put it in your waste basket, but I hope there will be more women to take it up that are brilliant and give their opinion of it. SWAMPSCOTT.

Evelyn Watches "Thaw in Jail"

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—For nearly an hour Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wearing her gorgeous stage costume, sat in a darkened auditorium and watched motion pictures of Harry K. Thaw's life in jail. She showed every move of the famous fugitive as it was flashed on the screen.

She neither spoke nor moved until the film was finished, running from Thaw's first appearance in court to his trousers from Sheriffcoke jail to Canada.

Build New Fence Where Thaw Fled

BEACON, N. Y., Sept. 6.—The erection of a second fence with large gate has been started at the Matteawan State Hospital. It is at the point where Thaw escaped. As teams enter the first gate it will be locked, then the inner gate will be opened. In this way escapes will be impossible.

Japanese, Stabbed by Mistake, Dead

TOKIO, Sept. 6.—Morisato Abe, director of the political bureau of the Japanese foreign office, who was stabbed by two Chinese assassins Thursday night by mistake for Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first provisional president of China, died today. It was at first thought Japanese, who resented the policy of the foreign office toward anti-Japanese legislation in California, did the stabbing.

BATTLE SCENE NOW SHIFTED TO MONTREAL

his position. Those charges against him are evidently a frame-up."

Courtcook would refuse to see Jerome's face looking out at them from the windows of their dirty little jail. They want nothing better than to send Thaw's partner to prison.

The offence charged against him is not a trivial one. Gambling on railroad property is a serious matter, under Courtcook laws. It carries with it in practically all cases, a year's prison sentence.

Is Now a "Fugitive."

Jerome has apparently decided to stay out of Courtcook and avoid trial, but his offence is so serious that Courtcook officials may have him brought here for trial if he appears anywhere in Canada.

The man whom New York State is paying $10,000 to "get Thaw," is a fugitive from justice and dare not show his face.

Jerome has one hope—that the government will quash the charge against him. Steps have already been taken in this direction, but they ran up against a stone wall when Crown Prosecutor A. C. Ansoo absolutely refused to quash the charge. He said:

"I received a great number of complaints about the open gambling of Mr. Jerome and I consider it my duty to push this case against him.

"He was setting a bad example for the children of this community by gambling in public for money. Every one could see him and his companions playing.

"The wonderful fight that Thaw's lawyers are putting up for him is amazing.

"Thaw's guards said he slept well last night, in spite of the excitement of yesterday. He retired after the Courtcook Band had given a concert beneath his barred windows, playing "God Save the King," while the throng shouted cheers for Thaw." Ordinarily this band plays in the parks, but the members could not resist the chance of playing for Thaw before a sympathetic and enthusiastic audience.

Thaw hasn't got a leg to stand on. Everybody knows that. There isn't the slightest reason under the Canadian Extradigration Act why Thaw should not have been pushed across the frontier ten days ago. And yet he is still in Canada, and likely to remain there for some weeks to come.

Everything which has helped to detain him has been a quibble. They have built a breastwork around him of red tape, nothing more. Yesterday when it seemed that they were on the last ditch, they found a fresh quibble which retains Thaw on Canadian soil for an indefinite period.

Scene Now Shifts.

The scene of the drama now shifts to Montreal, and may later go to Ottawa or even to the Privy Council at London. There may be weeks or years of delay.

Thaw comes to Montreal as a man illegally held under an act that is unquestionably unconstitutional, and which a constitution that is all down is black and white, like the Constitution of the United States, there are all sorts of opportunities for technical questions that will drag on for months.

Thaw is certain that he has won a long delay and immediately after breakfast began packing up for the journey to Montreal, where he must be produced in the Supreme Court on September 15, when arguments will be delivered on the writ of habeas corpus secured by J. N. Greenshield and W. A. Ahearne from Lafleur, Cross and Gervais in the Court of Appeals.

"It was a glorious victory, a brilliant legal achievement," he exclaimed jubilantly. "I had about given up hope of getting further on Canadian soil when this remarkable coup was brought about by Mr. Greenshield and Mr. Ahearne. I have been assured today by W. L. Saurtleff, my attorney of record, that I will positively be free on the night of the 15th unless I do something in order to establish my civic status in Canada."

JEROME'S ARREST REVEALS HOSTILITY OF COATICOOK

COATICOOK, P. Q., Sept. 6.—The "inside story" of the arrest of William Travers Jerome for gambling came to light today. It is a story of the hostility Coaticook feels toward Thaw's Nemesis, and the story is such that after hearing the facts Jerome commented:

"I have known all along that the Thaw forces were distributing money."

The gambling game for which the attorney was arrested lasted, so far as he was concerned, about fifteen minutes. He "took a hand" in a game several newspaper men had started, and it cost him a little over a dollar for the short time he played.

During the fifteen minutes that he played one of Coaticook's busybodies searched out W. L. Shurtleff, a Thaw attorney, and asked him to have Jerome arrested. Shurtleff went over to observe the game, but declined to act.

Dr. Gilbert A. Trenholm, a local physician, spent the early part of the night circulating through Coaticook denouncing Jerome. Popular opinion met him more than half way, for Jerome has been even more unpopular here than he was at Sherbrooke.

If nothing else indicates this the fact that waiters at the Coaticook House have declined to serve him certainly does.

Trenholm Involved.

Dr. Trenholm, who issued the warrant for Jerome, denied that he had seen Justice McKee and McKee denied that he had seen Dr. Trenholm.

It is known, however, that the physician spent the later hours of the night with George Sanderson McLelish, who has been acting as the Thaw fiscal agent since the beginning of Thaw's Canadian experiences.

Aldrich, who swore out the warrant, says he did so at Dr. Trenholm's request.

Jerome permitted himself to be taken by Constable Andrews to the cell which Thaw had occupied for a few hours more than two weeks ago. The door was locked on him and he was left to his cigarettes and meditations for an hour.

Meantime the attorneys for New York State found out in quick order that Justice McKee, the only available justice in town, had left the courthouse at the time of the arrest and had not told where he was going. Captain Langton jumped into Jerome's car, and taking a local guide aboard set out to locate McKee if he was in the district. When he was found forty-five minutes later he was sitting in the office of the Coaticook House.

McKee submitted to persuasion and allowed himself to be brought into the automobile and driven to the courthouse. He said he would fix bail at $500. White Hector Verret, attorney for New York State, was arranging to go on Jerome's bond Jerome himself was brought from his cell to the court. The complaint was read to him and he immediately began to argue his own case.

Jerome Demands Writ.

"I demand a writ of desistment," he told the Justice.

"You have no standing in this court," the Magistrate replied.

"Then I should like to say, your Honor," Jerome continued, "that poker is not a game of chance and that therefore the complaint against me is faulty. Poker is based on the doctrine of probabilities and governed by the integrals of different columns. I therefore——"

"I regret," cut in the Justice, "that I cannot permit you to continue."

At this point Mr. Verret appeared with the bail and Justice McKee gave Jerome his liberty.

All of Thaw's lawyers denied that they had anything to do with the affair. They were so much worked up over the arrest that they were on the point of going to Jerome and offering their legal advice as proof of their sympathy when word came in the station that the prisoner was released.

As soon as Jerome was released he drove to the Coaticook Inn and failed.

"I have known all along," said he, "that the Thaw forces have had a man in this town who is distributing money."

He said other things, too, but nothing with equal force. Ten minutes after he had been at the station an elderly justice of the peace put in his appearance and made a speech. His name is C. J. Cush-

Makes Hairy Growths Vanish From the Skin

(Aids to Beauty)

It is now such an easy matter to banish hair one wanted that no woman need longer tolerate superfluous growths on chin, lip or cheek. A thick paste made with a little powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface 2 minutes, then rubbed off, takes the hairs with it, and, after it is washed to remove the remaining delatone, it will be free from spot or blemish. To avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.—Adv.

Poker Not Game of Chance, Says Jerome to Judge

William Travers Jerome, arrested on a charge of gambling in Coaticook, and haled before Magistrate James McKee, who deals in provisions when he is not dealing in justice, knows what poker is, and he "knows it isn't gambling."

This is what he told the magistrate:

"Poker is not a game of chance. It is a game of skill based on the principles of differential calculus and the law of infinite probability."

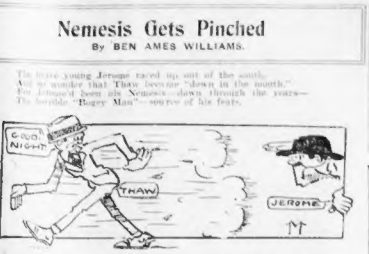
Nemesis Gets Pinched

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS.



"Well, get him," Jerome cried. "He hasn't a chance—Though I'm forced to admit he has led us a dance. Well invest him today, and we'll snatch him away. So quickly Vermont won't have one thing to say."

He trotted all the lawyers—he tripped up the judge—And all the Thaw side, disgusted, could only say "Fudge!" "Bring his body to court," said the judge—and a yell Came from where Thaw was fighting to stay in his cell.

"When we get him deported we'll kidnap him, sure," Bragged the Nemesis loud. "He's a lunatic—pure——" Let's just deal a few cards—we've got this here case cinched——" And the next thing we knew, Nemesis had got pinched.

The Dramatic Love Story of Harry Thaw and Evelyn

CHAPTER XII.

"Jealously is cruel as the grave."—Song of Solomon, viii, 6.

When Harry Thaw embarked on a consultatic stateroom in pursuit of Evelyn Nesbit and her mother he was prepared to go to any extent to obtain the girl for whom he longed with unquenchable desire.

Fall it one or infatuation of an others now or what you will, Harry Thaw's raging passion was the seventeen-year-old chorister with the appealing eyes.

Such a frenzy of feeling could not fail to breed fearful jealousy in a man of Thaw's nature. If he suffered any rivalry.

But at first the European trip was wholly successful from Thaw's point of view. He overtook Mrs. Nesbit and Evelyn in Paris and attached himself to their party.

According to the story known to by Evelyn on the witness stand on a spree months later day when she told a story unparalleled in the annals of feminine chicanery, was while Thaw was in Paris that June that he asked Evelyn to marry him. Her refusal and the reason she gave were subsequently to startle the civilized world.

But all the world knew then was that Mrs. Nesbit suddenly returned home. It was reported that she was without means in Paris and that she called standard Whites, who sent her money with which to defray her hotel bill.

Thus Evelyn and Thaw were left together in Paris, the city which added to Gelber to Paris, the city which added to achieved his first masterstroke of diplomation Paris, the city which asked no questions.

Four months passed. Broadway heard nothing of the pretty chorus girl. Harry Thaw was said to be traveling in Europe. What worries must have come to Mrs. Nesbit only she herself knows. Stanford White was dead and Thaw had been ousted from the affections of Evelyn by a younger man whom he regarded as his inferior in every way.

In October, 1903, Evelyn Nesbit came back to New York alone.

There were rumors up and down Broadway that she had been with Thaw abroad, also that the two had quarreled violently.

One of the first persons Evelyn sought when she arrived in New York was Stanford White. She gave him a document which was later to be alluded to as "the affidavit." It was said that Evelyn, in this document, had accused Thaw of treating her cruelly. The original affidavit is said to have been subsequently destroyed, after a photographic copy had been made for White to retain.

There was also talk that Evelyn was to bring suit against Thaw for $75,000, but this threatened action failed to materialize.

Meanwhile, Thaw was on Evelyn's trail. He sailed for home on the next steamer and, the moment he arrived in New York, learned that Evelyn had seen White.

Furious Against White.

Thaw was furious against White, and more determined than ever to keep Evelyn away from the architect. He saw Evelyn within a fortnight after he landed on Broadway. He began a campaign of reconciliation. He also cast about in his mind for some plan to discredit White in Evelyn's eyes.

It is known that Thaw set detectives on White's trail. It is generally believed that this "shadowing" of the architect by men hired by Thaw began soon after Thaw came back to New York in the Fall of 1903.

The two men were suddenly aware of each other as factors in Evelyn's life. But White was temporarily in favor with Evelyn. He also relied much on Mrs. Nesbit, for Evelyn had made up with her mother and the latter had, very reason, as she thought, to hold Thaw responsible for the events of four months before in Paris.

White soon found out that he was being watched and he amused himself by playing "hide and seek" with Thaw's detectives. His favorite method, at one time, was to leave his office, engage a taxicab and be driven to the Brook Club, of which he was a member. He would note that his taxi was followed by another.

Arriving at the Brook Club, White would leave his own taxi, pass through the clubhouse and out the back door, chuckling to himself. He did this until the detectives learned of his ruse.

Paid Assiduous Court.

Thaw kept up an assiduous court to Evelyn at this time. He found where the girl and her mother were living. He sent a taxi load of expensive furniture to the Nesbit flat. Mrs. Nesbit sent it back to him.

But when Evelyn herself Thaw was more successful, in spite of Mrs. Nesbit and White. Evelyn met Thaw, who renewed his passionate declarations of love and caresses to marry him.

The Winter and Summer passed, with Thaw attaining a strong ground. In the Fall of 1904 Evelyn disappeared from sight. Thaw was suspected. She had gone abroad. Thaw had gone abroad, too.

A few weeks after Evelyn Nesbit and Harry Thaw went to Europe, a cable from Lucerne, Switzerland, announced the arrest of Harry K. Thaw of Pittsburgh on a charge of overspending his allowance. That was nothing for Thaw and Broadway would ordinarily have paid little attention to such incidents. But the story stirred Broadway and Pittsburgh, too, was the paragraph added to the auto despatch that, when Thaw was arrested, he was accompanied by "Mrs. Thaw."

VINDICATED BY JURY, SAYS CAMINETTI

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—F. Drew Caminetti, son of the Commissioner-General of Immigration, convicted of violating the white slave law, now awaiting sentence Wednesday, will today not appeal his case. The young man said that the fact that he was convicted on only one of the four counts was in a way a vindication.

"I am relieved now that the long strain is over," said Caminetti today. "I am glad the jury did not disagree and that the mess is not to be gone over again. I am found guilty of violating the white slave law in taking Lola Norris to Reno, but I am not guilty of persuading or enticing her away. I hope they will drop the charges of conspiracy against me."

Caminetti, free under a $10,000 bond pending sentence by Federal Judge Van Fleet, was cheerful today. The verdict of the jury made possible a sentence of five years and a fine of $5,000. Maury I. Diggs, convicted on the same charge, may be sentenced to twenty years and a $20,000 fine.

Hetty Green Caught in City Tax Auction

New York Puts $6,000,000 in Millionaires' Property Under Hammer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Property of New York millionaires, churches, clubs and corporations, upon which taxes are in arrears, is going under the hammer today. Six million dollars in liens represents the aggregate.

Among the property to be sold is real estate belonging to the Duchess de Talleyrand, formerly Anna Gould; Hetty Green, "Big Tim" Sullivan, Howard Gould, H. G. Phipps and Victor Herbert.

An effort will be made to collect a tax of seventy-five cents levied in 1850 against the predecessor to the Interboro Rapid Transit Company. The interest is $300.

Baseball or Liberty Choice of Girl Star

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Agnes Arnold, fifteen, of Long Island City, has until next Thursday to decide whether she will quit playing baseball or risk penalties threatened by the Children's Aid Society. Despite protests, she persists in playing ball. Mrs. Leary, probation officer, has given her until Thursday to make her choice.

Underwood for Senate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood is expected to announce his candidacy for the United States Senate for the term beginning March 4, 1915. Close political associates of Mr. Underwood believe he will make an announcement immediately after the new Underwood tariff bill is signed.

FREE Asthma Relief

New, Successful Method Brings Hope to All Who Suffer. A Test Sent FREE.

Think of it! To be freed of that ever-present dread of another asthmatic attack—to know you had experienced your last, awful battle with that terrible malady—is not that a hope to inspire you to action?

Well, that is just the hope that this new, wonderfully successful method of ours brings to all asthmatics. And we are prepared to prove it free of any cost to you.

Break Those Chains! Throw Off Asthma!

There is no guesswork or anything of the kind about this new method. It is simply a reasonable, logical system of attacking the malady with the weapons that modern, scientific investigation has made known to us. The base of the disease—the conditions that cause it—are the objects aimed at and most successfully reached.

When the poisons of asthma are filtered out of the blood and the physical conditions that made their formation and retention possible have been corrected, there can remain no asthmatic tendencies. It is upon this unquestionable fact that this new method is based and it is due to the fact that it has proved so successful in countless cases.

Of course, a mere temporary relief could be obtained by the usual methods of treating asthma with powders, smokes, sprays or inhalers, but that is not meeting and overcoming the disease. Besides, these devices too often depend upon such dangerous drugs as cocaine, ether, morphine, and thus carry with them the possibilities of contracting a terrible drug habit.

Our method aims beyond such mere temporary relief and to the complete cessation of all asthma poison from the system so as to leave you as free from it as if you had never had an attack.

Let us prove all this. Clip and mail the coupon below to-morrow and see if we don't convince you by actual experience.

Why Not Invite Huerta to Instil Life Into Coming Campaign?

The Bull Moose editors Governor Sulzer to "explain," but there are still some things the Bull Moose doesn't understand about that 1912 Presidential campaign.

* * *

The Republican machine has decided to let the convention pick the convention chairman, and Judge Thomas F. Riley—the Democratic machine—has done ditto to the Democratic convention.

* * *

If they keep on, in a few years they'll be actually letting the people pick their own candidates.

* * *

The Republicans and Democrats followed a Progressive example in leaving the picking task to the conventions.

* * *

Many of our best legislators viewed with intense interest the paragraph that told how one J. Otis Wardwell has been drawing $25,000 a year from the Elevated as "general counsel."

* * *

Mr. Wardwell practiced a great deal of law—in his capacity as "general counsel"—in the State House corridors.

* * *

Introducing Mr. Alfred H. Evans of Northampton, a good Welshman, as the Prohibition candidate for Governor, All he wants is 50,000 votes. "Caesar was ambitious."

* * *

Gardner and Beaton say their friends are organizing splendidly, but it is understood that when election day comes around, a lot of people who are merely voters, will stand and watch the organization parades march by without a flutter in their cardiacs.

* * *

Parades are pretty, but who wants a drum-major for Governor?

* * *

Congressman Gardner is planning a four-day automobile speaking tour. He will start in with Ayer, and it is rumored that he will take a lot of the hot variety along with him for distribution.

* * *

Any person wishing a diagram of the airway should apply early, as the supply is limited.

* * *

All we know about the Maine Congressional fight is, that Secretary of State Bryan is going to sacrifice several hundredsdollars of Chautauqua money to make a few addresses there. State Department business will get some attention from that man yet. He's getting positively reckless with his money.

* * *

In giving the list of Senatorial candidates the once over, we observe that a hot campaign is in progress in the Third Bristol District, between Andrew P. Doyle of New Bedford, Republican, and Andrew P. Doyle of New Bedford, Democrat.

* * *

Thomas F. Hannafin of Holyoke is one of the four men scrambling for the Democratic nomination in Senator Quigley's old Second Hampden District. Quigley was Governor Foss' personal representative in the Senate, but Hannafin says he positively won't be with the Governor, unless the Governor is right—so there!

* * *

We referred yesterday to John J. McDevitt, would-be Senator from Quincy. It now appears that one David Murray of Hyde Park has already been irging on Senator McDevitt's toga, and finds it an excellent fit.

* * *

Mrs. Pankhurst is coming to Boston; but not till after the gubernatorial fight is over. It is authoritatively stated.

* * *

President Huerta of Mexico—confronted by the provision that a constitutional president cannot be a candidate for regular election to the office, is reported to be planning to make himself eligible. Now there's a man that would instil some real life into Massachusetts politics—some of that fighting blood Congressman Gardner deplores.

* * *

By the way, boys, "Gussie" for a nom de guerre (Persons wishing a translation, apply to Mr. Gardner. He's an accomplished French scholar.)

* * *

Representative Martin Hays is a candidate for a third term in Ward 25. Brighton doesn't usually send a representative up for more than two terms. A thorough investigation shows no reason why the rule should be broken in Mr. Hays' case.

* * *

Like others of his class, Mr. Hays voted spectacularly on the right side of a few big measures, and let his evil influence be felt on the wrong side of a score of little ones. For instance, it was he who prevented the establishment of a butter fat standard that would prevent the sale of adulterated and fraudulent ice cream. Mr. Hays has an intimate political friend who is in the ice cream business.

* * *

Hays can't seriously hurt the House of Representatives, but he does give Brighton an awful black eye.

Predicts German Army of 11,000,000

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—Colonel Richard Gaedke, the military writer, in an article on the future German army figures, says that in 1925 Germany will control 11,000,000 fighting men, including, in addition to the regulars, the landwehr and landsturm, 5,380,000 men, which can be mobilized, although not trained, in a short time.

Diamond in Claim.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Augustus Rhyer, a Patchogue barber, visited Water Island Beach and dug up a clam, which was open. In the shell was found embedded in it a girl's ring, whose setting held three diamonds. Gus ate the clam and gave his girl the ring.

POLICE PROBE SOMERVILLE GIRL'S STORY

The Somerville police today began an investigation of the case of Lillian Hapgood, thirteen, employed in the home of George Homer at No. 30 Joy street, Somerville, who was found gagged and bound under a bed on the second story and who said she had been attacked by a strange woman. They have been unable to find any signs of a struggle.

Mrs Happen told the police of a strange woman who had come to the house and demanded her rights, and on being refused had forced her way into the house, and requested that Miss Happgood produce her employer's watch. She also demanded some rings which Miss Hapgood said she had worn.

"When I refused again," the girl said today, "she grabbed me, knocked me down, tied me, carried me upstairs and shoved me under the bed. In the struggle, my two rings dropped on the floor."

The girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Happegy, live at No. 6 Chestnut place, Somerville.

REP. VINCENT BROGNA OF BOSTON.

This is a Democrat in the Legislature who betrayed his party platform, disregarded the warnings of the Tax Commissioner, the Railroad Commission, the Public Franchise League, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and the Interstate Commerce Commission, and defied the veto of the Governor whom his party elected, in order that he might pass over to the tender mercies of the New Haven Railroad monopoly more than half the street railways in the State.

There never was a bill so universally condemned as the Western Trolley Merger Bill about which the Democratic party platform had said: "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY STEAM RAILROADS, AND BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH," but Mr. Brogna supported it.

If you wish to send friends of law-breaking monopolies to the Legislature you will help this man in his campaign for re-election. If you do not wish your representative to serve your enemies, you will elect some other man.

To put this man on the same ballot with Lieutenant-Governor Walsh as a Democratic candidate is to put a stone around Mr. Walsh's neck.

Chicago Man Wills Bowdoin $80,000

Frances E. Dole, Boston Niece, Gets a $60,000 Bequest.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6. Bowdoin college, at Brunswick, Me., will receive $80,000 from the $500,000 estate of Edward Y. Drummond, a wholesale dry goods merchant, according to the terms of his will made public today. A building is to be erected at Bowdoin to be known as Drummond Hall.

The Drummond home is in Bristol, Me., was left to Mary Drummond, Frank Drummond, Helen D. Sewall and Rose Sewall. Frank Drummond was given $70,000 and each of the three nieces was given $40,000. Frances V. Dole of Boston, another niece, was given $60,000.

McAdoo Offends Senatorial Dignity

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. The Senate has rebuked Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo for a breach of official courtesy. He had sent to the Senate an amendment to the income tax amendment of the tariff bill which he wished incorporated. Such communications can only be made through the President, according to Washington etiquette.

FEDERAL FIGHT ON NEW HAVEN'S SHIP MERGER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Federal prosecutions are demanded today to dissolve the alliance between the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Morgan and Mellon Steamship Line and the relations of the Pennsylvania Railroad with various other steamship companies. Destruction of competition and injury to the commerce of Boston and other big cities is alleged.

The suit for action comes in a petition by Attorney-General McReynolds from the Baltimore Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

LOCAL SOCCER SEASON OPENS THIS AFTERNOON

The soccer season will be officially opened this afternoon when the first games of the Boston and Eastern League schedule will be played. The season is down for meeting and keen competition is expected.

Many new teams have joined the league and it is now one of the largest soccer organizations in the country. A very successful season is expected.

Of the new teams entered the return of the General Electrics, after an absence of two years, is probably the most conspicuous and will be looked favorably by the General Electric Company. A Wall lams, former manager, will again look after the team.

Local interest will be a big day at three of the six games will be played here. Boston Americans have the new Lynn Hibs team in their midst and will play at Jamaica Plain. Charlestown plays General Electrics at Sullivan square while Trimo and Swedish Americans clash at Brighton playground.

Wanderers are home with Lynn Thistle, while St. George's routed to Brookline and Lynn Essex plays their date at Widow Park, Lynn. At same start of clash.

SPEARS RACES CAVANAGH AT REVERE TRACK

BEST EVENTS TONIGHT.

Sprint match race (best two in three heats)—Bob Spears of Australia vs. Frank Cavanagh of Newark.

Twenty-five-mile motor-paced race—Clarence Carman of Newark vs. Percy Lawrence of San Francisco vs. Jimmy Moran of Chelsea.

A sprint match race between Bob Spears, the Australian cyclist, and Frank Cavanagh, the Irish champion, and a twenty-five-mile motor-paced race with Clarence Carman, Jimmy Moran and Percy Lawrence as competitors, will feature a long list of events at the Revere cycle track tonight.

This will be the first appearance of Spears before a Bench crowd, but he comes here well recommended by Manager Nat Butler, who says that his racing at the Newark track against the best professional riders of America is all that could be desired. If he performs up to expectations he should give Frank Cavanagh a hard match for the honors. Cavanagh is very popular here and in several match races proved that he has the lead as well as his speed, and he has bundles of the latter.

The motor-paced race should be another close event, as the distance is short and assures fast riding. In this event Carman, Moran, the Chelsea veteran, and Lawrence will be the contestants. Worth Mitten, the Iowa rider, was scheduled to race tonight, but he broke his leg in practice at the Philadelphia track yesterday. Moran was substituted and should be a worthy rival for the other two riders over this distance, as he proved by defeating George Wiley, the champion, that he is good over the short route as well as the long one.

Giants Will Tackle Athletics Sunday

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—If baseball enthusiasts care to get a line on the two teams that will probably fight it out for the world's championship, they had better go to Wiedemeyer's Park, Newark, N. J., Sunday, where the Athletics and champion Giants cross bats in a benefit exhibition game.

When the pastor of St. Joseph's Church, of West Hoboken, made a request to McGraw to have his men play the Phillies, the little Napoleon replied: "If Connie Mack is willing, you can bet I am."

It is possible that Chief Bender will oppose either Fromme or Demaree in the box.

Tom Halpin Runs at Toronto Fair

Tom Halpin of the B. A. A. will compete in a special quarter-mile scratch race which will be held in Toronto in connection with the Canadian National Exhibition this afternoon.

Halpin will compete against Rosenberger of the I. A. A. C. of New York and Brock of Toronto. Mel Sheppard, who was to compete in this event, will run in the special 1,000-yards race instead, at the request of the fair management. In addition to Sheppard it is quite probable that Brock and Tait will also compete in the 1,000 yards event. These races are part of the regular program of events which will be held at the Fair today.

Langford in Gotham.

Yale Linemen Ready for First Workouts

SIASCONSET, Nantucket, Sept. 6.—Line candidates for the Yale football team are here to begin practice under Head Coach Jones and Captain Ketchum. They are: J. R. Pendleton, H. Van Hoit, Farwell Knapp, C. G. Robinson, C. H. Roberts, G. Catlin, P. Langenderfer, H. E. Martin, P. W. Oakes, E. J. Madden, L. Carpenter, L. J. Arnold, J. E. Conroy, J. P. Walden, H. Harrison, J. Wadsworth, N. M. Way and N. Talbot.

The work in the line promises will be rudimentary and in the nature of conditioning the men. The first day's work was simply a long walk with a swim at the end. The golf club and casino have extended the privilege of their membership to the squad, and some of the men are taking part of their exercise in golf and tennis. The men will remain here until September 11, when they go to New Haven.

Safferty Outswims Conroy.

In a mile swimming race at Revere Beach, late yesterday afternoon, William Safferty of Winthrop beat out J. J. Conroy. The winner's time was 20 minutes. Conroy had cramps thirty yards from the finish. A dinner will be tendered Safferty by Conroy at Lynn tomorrow evening.

BOY AND GIRL SWIMMERS IN CITY FINALS

This afternoon at 2:30 p. m. the final swimming meet for the season of 1915 will be held at Wood Island Park under the auspices of the Park and Recreation Department.

This meet will be similar in character to the final track and field meet which was held last week at Franklin Field. It will be made up of competitors who have been victorious in the numerous local swimming events which have been taking place during the summer at the Park and Recreation Department beaches. Twelve such local competitions have been held since June 26, including four interdistrict meets. Out of all this preliminary effort winners have been developed for the exacting test today.

Good Swimmers Developed Here.

In the past few years the bathing resorts conducted by the city have been turning out a fine array of young swimmers of both sexes. At each beach there has sprung up a crop of clever water athletes who have mastered all the best points of speed swimming. The best of these have been brought forward in the preliminary meets. The names listed in the program include many that are familiar to the followers of this sport.

In the girls' senior fifty-yard dash a splendid race is sure to take place between Alice Eldridge of Charlestown, Maude Brophy of South Boston, Gertrude Monahan of East Boston, Winnie Conley of Neponset, Isabelle Lavery of East Boston and Mary Barry of North End. Those are only a few of the entries in that event, but they are the best girl swimmers in the city. The junior girls' dash will not be less exciting.

Boys Out for Honors.

The best racing between the boys and young men will take place in the boys' senior fifty-yard dash and in the senior fifty-yard swim. In the former event there is much doubt as to the outcome of the fight between Frank Pierce of the North End and Harry Kiley and George Morris and Fred Wagner of East Boston. Kiley seems to be the favorite.

In the quarter the guessing lies between Pierce and Santonosso, the teammates of the North End, and Wagner and Appleby of East Boston. Pierce won this event last year, and is a favorite. But he district mate, Santonosso, has made great strides this year. And Wagner has been in the hands of Mr. Holmes, the veteran Brookline swimmer, doing fine work under his coaching. Holmes picks his man as an easy winner.

Those men, and others almost as fast, will also take part in the relay races. The rivalry that exists between them will make the senior relay one of the great events of the day.

As in the case of the meet last week, the competition today will settle the individual and the district honors.

The meet will be managed by Nathaniel J. Young, who directed the final track meet last week.

The prizes will be awarded after the last event. The prizes for the district meets will also be presented.

Michigan Plans to Rejoin "Big Nine"

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 6.—The University of Michigan is ready to resume membership in the "Big Nine" college conference, according to a statement received today by the University of Minnesota Board of Regents from the governing board of the Michigan college.

The communication recites that unit executives in the Western conference have reached an agreement that all rules be-fore enforcement must be approved unanimously by members of the conference.

"Using these conditions," says the statement, "this board would welcome a resumption by the University of Michigan of membership in the conference.

Ritchie Too Clever for Tommy Murphy

Lightweight Champion Would Probably Be Able to Defeat New York Fighter

By JACK CONWAY.

IF the proposed bout between Willie Ritchie and Tommy Murphy takes place on Thanksgiving Day at one of the Pacific Coast clubs, the lightweight champion is certain to enter the ring a 10 to 8 or 10 to 7 favorite. Murphy is a great little fighter, but we do not consider him in the same class with the doughty Frisco boy who won such a decisive victory over "Mexican Joe" Rivers on the Fourth of July.

Murphy is twenty-eight years of age and has been fighting for over a decade. Therefore, it is only reasonable to suppose that he is not as strong today as he was five or six years ago. The wear and tear of over 100 ring battles must have affected the rugged Harlem battler.

Murphy is an aggressive, two-handed fighter and usually wins his bouts by his boring in tactics. Probably as also a fairly good boxer and believes that he would be able to outbox and outfight the champion.

RITCHIE IS REAL CHAMPION.

RITCHIE, however, is young, strong and ambitious. Besides this he has the heart of a champion, which is half the battle. Willie has never been punished badly in any of his battles, and as a result will be as rugged as a young bronco if he fights Murphy.

In the humble opinion of the writer, Ritchie will prove too fast and elusive for Murphy. There is not a lightweight boxer in the world who is a better boxer than Ritchie. Freddy Welsh is a very skilful performer, but we do not believe that he has got anything on Ritchie.

The Coast youth is, also, a hard puncher. His right-hand cross is a sure knock-winner, and usually drops his opponent for the count. This was the blow that riddled Ad Wolgast and caused the downfall of Rivers.

OPPOSITION TO WELSH BOUT.

RITCHIE is scheduled to meet Freddy Welsh in a twenty-round "go" at Vancouver, B. C., on September 20, but just now it looks as though the battle would never take place. The champion wants more money for his end of the purse than the Vancouver promoters are willing to give him.

It would not be surprising if the promoters in San Francisco and Vernon are trying to induce Ritchie to call off his bout with Welsh. They are opposed to the match from the start, and if Welsh gets a draw with Ritchie the champion would not be such a good drawing card against Tommy Murphy in November.

BROWN'S PLANS HARD CAMPAIGN.

MICKEY BROWN, the skillful Malden bantamweight, is preparing for a strenuous campaign in the ring. Brown is the best bantamweight developed in this section of the country for a number of years and if he is handled properly he should develop into a "headliner."

Jimmy Duval, Brown's manager, would like to match his protege against either Johnny Coulon or "Kid" Williams. Duval believes that Brown would be able to make things interesting for either of these men. Either Coulon or Williams would be a big "card" in this city if pitted against Brown.

Jimmy Walsh would be able to give Coulon or Williams more opposition than Brown, but neither of these men would fight Walsh unless he made 116 pounds. Williams and Brown have already fought once, the referee stopping the contest in the eighth round in order to prevent the local boy from being knocked out. Mickey took the bout on short notice and would be able to give a much better account of himself at the present time.

DELMONT WOULD BOX MICKEY.

IF Brown is unable to secure a match with Coulon or Williams, Al Delmont declares he will accommodate him at any New England club. The veteran North End boxer says that he intends to keep busy in the squared enclosure during the next eight months, and that nothing would please him better than a bout with Brown.

Delmont is not as good a boxer today as he was a few years ago, but he is still able to make the leading local boys extend themselves in order to win. What Al lacks in speed he makes up for by his ring generalship. It is a question whether Delmont would be able to make the low weight which Brown would be certain to demand.

RED SOX, WITH MOSELY IN THE BOX, HOPE TO CLEAN UP THE MACKMEN

HOPE TO BREAK TIE BETWEEN YANKEE BOATS

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

MARBLEHEAD, Sept. 6.—Today will see the German and American sonders out again looking for wind in order to finish up a race that started yesterday afternoon and was never finished. The weather has been the only disappointment to the American Yankee skippers. They have won enough, but the wins have been fluky.

The Germans are amazed. They hardly know what to make of any such weather as has been presented this week as a racing proposition. Everybody was disgusted over yesterday's race. Not a boat in the fleet on the second round had steerage way enough to keep them from going off the course anywhere from a half mile to a mile.

The Germans sailed a better race yesterday than they have during the week.

Race Over 12-Mile Course.

The race today will be over a windward and leeward course of twelve miles, and a big fleet of pleasure craft was on hand this morning to witness a race that may break a tie between three American sonders.

Never before in the history of boat racing, at least, in the history of sonder racing, have the hows of six sonder boats pointed in so many directions as those which participated in the fourth international race of more yesterday.

To the ordinary landsman it was impossible to tell just where the boats were racing or just where the course marks were. There were six boats, and it is safe to say that when the committee flag was raised, calling the race off, six points of the compass were indicated by the bows of these boats.

All Boats Away Off Course.

There was not a breath of wind, scarcely a ripple and only the long, heavy rolling of the sea when the "called off" flag was shown. The Kiira was pointed toward the Cohasset shore, the Angela VI. was headed for Beverly Cove, the Cima swinging anywhere from northeast to southwest, the Sprig was somewhat off her course, headed for Boston lightship, the Scrum was slowly but surely drifting toward Swampscott, while the Wiltshards surprised those on shore by heading back home. It was not because she was sore that way, but the current, no wind and the heavy roll accounted for it.

Langford May Not Meet Joe Jeannette

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Regarding the proposed bout between Frank Moran of Pittsburgh and Gunboat Smith, a deadlock developed today. It was learned that the Garden A. C. had secured Smith's consent to box in the Madison Square arena with the winner of the Fuller-Dillman contest several weeks ago. At that time Gibson and Buckley figured that Fuller would win. The St. Nicholas A. C., on the other hand, sewed up Moran for a bout with Smith, and Jimmy Johnston now says that he expects Moran's manager to keep his word. If Smith, however, holds out for the Garden, Moran will agree to meet Langford the latter part of this month.

Meanwhile the Garden A. C. may lose the match between Joe Jeannette and Sam Langford. The St. Nicholas A. C. said to have agreed upon terms with Jeannette and Langford's manager, Joe Woodman, had a talk with Johnston. Langford is ready to box Jeannette in either of the rival clubs in this city. Incidentally Woodman denied the cable report that Jack Johnson had decided to cancel the bout with the Tar Baby in Paris on December 20.

Pittsfield H. S. Has Hard Football Games

PITTSFIELD, Sept. 6.—Pittsfield High school's football squad will report for practice Monday and Coach James Young will be in charge of the coaching. The same afternoon a mass meeting of the athletic association will be held and officers elected, including a captain of the football team. Manager Southard has announced the schedule:

Sept. 20, Searles at Pittsfield.
Sept. 27, Williamstown at Pittsfield.
Oct. 4, Pittsfield at Gardner.
Oct. 11, Pittsfield at Adams.
Oct. 18, Pittsfield at Holyoke.
Oct. 25, Adams at Pittsfield.
Nov. 1, Pittsfield at Williamstown.
Nov. 8, Pittsfield at Searles.
Nov. 8, Pittsfield at Drury.
Nov. 15, Troy at Pittsfield.
Nov. 22, Drury at Pittsfield.
Nov. 27 (Thanksgiving), Chicopee at Pittsfield.

Ridge Laces Mohr.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Danny Ridge of New York gave Walter Mohr of Brooklyn a severe trouncing in a ten-round bout that went the limit at the East New York A. C., Brooklyn.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

THERE was a matter of quite some pitching in the two spasms at the old grounds yesterday. You would go a long way before you would see two such excellently pitched games in one day. Nineteen innings, with only one run, is really going some. It was not so much light batting as really good pitching. The pair who worked in the first game — Quinn and Seaton — outpitched the artists who figured in the second game—Rudolph and Alexander. While Quinn had the misfortune to lose his round, he pitched just as good a game as Seaton, where each was quite remarkable. It was not so much the striking out of opponents, but the general all-around work of these men that made the contest stand out.

FOUR hits were recorded against Seaton and four against Quinn. Of the safeties scored off the Boston man, one was the real thing and three were scratches. Strunk, the first man up in the first inning, slammed the first ball pitched down the third base line. Smith made a gallant try, but could not quite reach the ball. However, he shunted it off and gathered it in, thereby holding the swat to a single. In the fourth, with a man on first, as the result of a pass, Magee laced a line drive to right for a clean single. Cravath, who followed, grabbed the ball past Quinn. Maranville ran up and grabbed the ball and turned to throw to second for a forceout, but Sweeney had not covered the bag. When "the Rabbit" found out he made a try to get there ahead of Magee, but soon saw he had no chance to do so. Then he whirled and threw the ball to first, but it arrived too late to kill off Cravath. This went for a single, but it was a very cheesy one. These three hits were all the Phillies got off Quinn until the ninth, when, with two down, Luderus hit to the left of Sweeney. It was rather a hard-hit ball, but Bill should have got it. The ball got by him, however, and the scorers credited Luderus with a single. Thus, it will be seen that Magee's crack was the only clean hit scored against Quinn. Quinn issued only two passes and hit one man with a pitched ball. He struck out five Quakers, and on the whole pitched one of the best games seen on the old grounds for a long time, in spite of the fact that he lost out by 1 to 0.

SEATON was not far behind him. He has proved to be one of the best twirlers in the National League this year. He has been particularly effective against the Boston club all season. The runs scored off him by the locals have been few and far between. In the first game of the double-header he let the Bostons down with four singles, and of these two were scratches. One of them was a bunt which Griffith beat out, and the other was a slow one to Knabe, which Zinn beat out by fast sprinting. The other two were solid cracks—one by Fred Smith in the third, and the other by Quinn in the eighth. Only two Boston men reached second base, and not one saw third. Seaton struck out five men and issued two passes. He was like a stone wall with men on bases. The only chance to score the Bostons had was in the fifth, when Magee muffed Zinn's hard liner and Griffith took a bunt. No one was out, and the chances looked bright. But Smith, in bunting, popped a little fly to Luderus, and Zinn was doubled at second.

WE in Boston have considered the Phillies a mighty lucky team to be up near the top of the National League race. We know most of the victories at the South End grounds have been lucky, and reports from the other parks indicate that they have their horseshoes with them all the time.

As a sample of the way things break for them, please read how they scored the solitary run that won the first game of the double-header.

It was in the fourth inning. After pitching two strikes to Paskert Quinn finally gave him a pass. Magee followed with a single to right. Then Cravath hit a slow one close to second, but Sweeney failed to cover the bag for a forceout, and this clogged the bases. Quinn put on steam and struck out the heavy-hitting Luderus. The infield, which had been playing up close, now drew back to their usual places to take a chance for a double-play. With the stage set that way, Doolan rolled a slow one at Sweeney, and the ball bounced out at first, but Paskert scored the run that won the game. Now, if the infield had been playing in to get the man at third, the chances are 5 to 1 that he would have been forced at the plate on Doolan's dribble.

QUINN is some pitcher, it is well to repeat. Also he is a man of parts.

IT is well that the two big Boston teams have agreed to play a post-season series. Both teams are favorites. The contests ought to bring about a general uprising of the "fans." Both teams are going good, and both will fight hard to the end of the season—the Red Sox to get into fourth place, or better, and the Boston Nationals to beat out Brooklyn for fifth place. The indications are that the two teams will finish their respective seasons not far apart, in the matter of games won and lost. The Sox have the lead on the other fellows just now, but there are four weeks more before the curtain falls on the championship races.

GOVERNOR TENER of Pennsylvania, once a star pitcher of the National League, enjoyed the double-header from Box 8, the said old grounds looked familiar. Many a game he pitched there in his palmy baseball days.

Stein of Beer Cost "Ping" Bodie $600

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.—"Ping" Bodie has partaken of the most expensive stein of beer ever recorded in baseball. The White Sox manager has informed the fence buster that his indiscretion would cost him exactly $600. It was not exactly a fine, as could be out of the question for one offence of this nature, but the punishment administered by the Sox leader robbed Bodie of a bonus of that amount to have been given him in case of total abstinence this season.

Bodie said he had been the "fall guy" long enough; that others had done the same thing and escaped punishment; that he was through with the club, and the sooner he departed from Comiskey's payroll the better he would like it.

London Cricketers Lead Germantown

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—The Incognito cricketers of London were in the lead at the close of play in the first match with the Germantown Cricket Club. The visitors scored 216 runs in their first innings, while the home team was retired for a total of 138.

Both teams played twelve men on a side. Austin, not out, for 55, made the best showing of Germantown, while M. Falcon, 42; D. M. P. Whitcomb, 31, not out, and Captain W. G. N. Sared and Hon. R. G. H. Mulholland, with thirty-five each, were the highest scorers for Englishmen.

Uhlan Establishes New Mile Record

HAMLINE, Minn., Sept. 6.—Uhlan, 1:58, established a new state record at the Great Western races here, trotting a mile in 1:59½. Track conditions were not favorable for the champion to break a world's record.

BATTERIES—

SECOND DOUBLE BILL IS CARDED FOR PILGRIMS

The Pilgrims and Phillies will engage in their second double-header in as many days at the South End grounds this afternoon, and judging by the excellent work of the two teams in the opening games today's contests will be hard fought and well played.

Four pitchers, considered the equal of those who performed in the first two games, are scheduled to oppose each other today. It will be "Hub" Perdue and Otto Hess vs. Al Brennan and Eppa Rixey, two of the celebrated moundsmen on the Philadelphia staff. Providing these duos come up to expectations the battles should be very even.

The Phillies are making desperate efforts to overhaul the Giants in the four remaining weeks of the season, and whatever gains they make against the Pilgrims will be well earned. The nine men which Stallings has rounded together is putting up a scrappy and well-played game, and the work of the pitching certainly speaks well for the scouts who discovered them. Schmidt, the new man on first for the Pilgrims, is a big fellow and a satisfactory performer.

The latest recruit to join the Pilgrims club, Eddie McCloskey, may get an opportunity to show his stuff in one of today's games. Although McCloskey has been with the club only a few days, Stallings is greatly pleased with his work in practice and will probably play him at third base.

McCloskey formerly wore the uniform of the Albany, Ga., club, where he was picked up by Scout Rod Sharpe. He is a mere boy yet, but Stallings has faith in him to make good eventually.

Manager Doolin of the Phillies is bending every effort toward taking both games of the double bill from the Pilgrims. If his team is successful and the Giants are downed at Brooklyn, McGraw's men will only have a lead of six games.

The outlook in the Phillies camp today is very much different than it was a few weeks ago. At that time the Giants were as many as twelve games ahead of Doolin's men. Then the New Yorks went sour on Philadelphia for a short series and dropped all three games. This second by-inserve them and a losing streak followed, although brief, counted a lot, as their lead was none too strong. Even now they are not winning with consistency, and this has given the Phillies confidence.

Another double header will be played here Monday, and should the Phillies get away with both contests it would undoubtedly cause a big stir in the baseball world.

SOX ANXIOUS TO BEAT MACKMEN FOUR STRAIGHT

RED SOX.		ATHLETICS.

Mosely, p.		Bender, p.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 6.—Today will mark the last appearance of the Red Sox in Philadelphia this season, and they will try hard to score their fourth straight victory of the series over the Athletics.

Mosely, the young pitcher who started for Boston in the second game of the opening double-header, will probably try his hand again today. Mosely was wild and was being hit pretty freely by the Mackmen, and when Carrigan saw a chance for a pinch hit he sent in Speaker. The latter played good, for Bodie, who succeeded Mosely, held the Macks hitless for the seven innings he worked.

"Chief" Bender or Shawkey will oppose the Boston Rookie. Bender has pitched against the Sox in this series and Mack may send the veteran to the mound today.

The three games that the Sox have captured from the Macks were won by Boston. The team developed a batting streak when it hit here, and even the great southpaw, Eddie Plank, failed to was more a puzzle to them, fell by the wayside.

Yesterday Plank handed a victory to the Red Sox, the Hub team winning by the score of 6 to 3.

Boston scored first in the second inning on a single, a balk, a steal and "Wally" Schang's sad throw. The Macks evened the score in the third on a pass to Murphy, Oldring's sacrifice and Baker's single. When the Athletics got two more in the fifth it looked like the Mackmen were about to garner a game, but the Hub men wouldn't see it that way. They came back in the sixth and got a run on singles by Engle and Speaker and a double steal which sent Engle across the plate. Plank lost his cunning in the seventh and the Red Sox sewed up the game with three runs scored.

Mack's men could do nothing with Mosely's delivery and only got two hits off him. Both came in the fifth, when Murphy singled and Oldring doubled. Collins, Baker and McInnis struck out in succession.

Red Sox and Pilgrims Compared by Players

Here is a comparison of the Red Sox and Pilgrims, player for player. The announcement that the two teams will clash in a Post-Season series has created almost as much interest among the "fans" as if another World's Series was to be played in Boston. This is something for each "fan" to study.

Norris Williams, Jr., of Harvard, will meet the Armstrong-Washburn match in the intercollegiate lawn tennis championship today, and this after championship today, and this afternoon he and Whitney Tackle Work Brown team will be seriously handicapped by the large number of holiday Armstrong eliminated the only contenders tennis. Feeney, last year's varsity fullback, is understood to be hopelessly inbut he defeated Wendell Kahn of Princeton, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, and Williams paired with E. H. Whitney, disposed of George M. Church and Kahn in the same sets, 6-3, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

Brown Team Starts Practice Sept. 15

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 6.—Brown football practice will begin at Andrews Field, September 15. The first game is with Colby, September 27.

According to present indications, the Brown team will be seriously handicapped by the large number of holiday tennis. Feeney, last year's varsity fullback, is understood to be hopelessly inbut he defeated Wendell Kahn of Princeton, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, and Williams paired with E. H. Whitney, disposed of George M. Church and Kahn in the same sets, 6-3, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

Captain Henry will probably play at tackle this year.

Bay State Riflemen in Title Matches

CAMP PERRY, O., Sept. 6.—Three Massachusetts sharpshooters have been appointed, after protracted competition, to represent the United States in the two championship team matches.

Sergeant Cortez B. Long has made the first team free rifle team, which today had Lieut. Edward Lowell, Winthrop, fourteen out of fifteen years, and the Fenwick, Swedish and Peruvian representatives for the championship of the world. Captain Stuart W. Wise and Sergeant Percy B. Scholefield are on the eight for the championship of the Pan-American Shooting Union next Tuesday.

The TUNNEL
GREATEST STORY of its kind since JULES VERNE

(From the German of Bernhard Kellermann. German version Copyrighted, 1913, by S. Fischer, Verlag, Berlin. English translation and compilation by ALLAN hushed slightly and mumbled some embarrassing reply.

There is a saying among lawyers which is to the effect that when the court is unusually complimentary and considerate it is because his honor wanted to ease the sting of the decision which he has already mentally formed against you. Allan sensed something of the same sort in Mr. Lloyd's studied kindness.

He fancied that Allan came to dinner, and would not hear a word of business until they were sitting over the coffee and cigars in the library. The strain of the past year had told on even Lloyd's nerves—or, rather, on a man who was popularly supposed to be entirely without nerves. His manner was not quite so phlegmatic and he looked older.

"I have spent several months going over the situation at Tunnel City," Allan began. Lloyd nodded encouragingly.

"We understand that you were very busy," he said. "I believe Ethel tried to communicate with you once or twice and did not succeed."

"I'm sorry," apologized the engineer, "but I left positive orders that I was to be 'incommunicado' so long as I remained at the works."

"Quite right—quite right," approved Mr. Lloyd, who could appreciate single-minded devotion to work.

"I have been doing a lot of figuring," Allan went on, "and I think we can go ahead and make a considerable showing at about one-third of our former operating cost."

The financier carefully fitted the tips of his fingers together and leaned back in his chair.

"Yes?" he said.

"Yes," declared Allan, with a little more enthusiasm. "By that I mean we can give the appearance of activity that we had before the smash, do fairly half as much actual work and all for about one-third of our previous monthly budget."

"And we have no money at all," remarked Mr. Lloyd.

"True," returned Allan warmly, "but surely we can raise some money now—or we will be able to in a few months."

The man of money shook his head doubtfully.

"I don't want to take too black a view of the situation," he said slowly, "but I'm afraid that you do not quite appreciate where we stand."

BLACK WORDS

"But surely," objected Allan, "there has been every sign for months and months that public confidence was returning."

"That is very true," conceded Lloyd. "I am very thankful to be able to see it. I have managed to convince most of my personal friends—that is one of the best indications. Public confidence is returning. Confidence is returning to great business enterprises. It is even returning to us, who were at the head of affairs—but I do not think that confidence in the tunnel is returning."

Something gripped Allan's heart like a steel band.

"You do not mean to say that the public opinion of the world would take the utter abandonment of the enterprise after all the money and effort that has gone into it?" he cried.

Lloyd nodded slowly.

"What I mean to say is something more and new enterprises were before the world. MacKenzie Allan was as dead as his tunnel. In the Spring he returned to Tunnel City, but no one paid any attention to the fact. This is a little less than the truth. One person noted the fact with much interest. She was Ethel Lloyd.

Her father had spoken to Allan of his daughter's admiration for him. This strange, beautiful and powerful minded young woman did not think of her feeling for Allan as admiration. It was characteristic that she was honest with herself, though honest with others, sometimes, only when it suited her convenience. She knew that she loved him. She also knew, with the sublime egoism of the truly great, that the man she loved could not have in him the elements of failure. She was certain that Allan would build the tunnel as she was of the tides and the sunrise. If he needed her help, that was only a part of the plan. The big thing was that somehow, some way, he would win.

She was anxious to see and talk with him, and she waited for several weeks in the belief that he would call on her father. Yet she was certain that he would come eventually. He had written to Lloyd from Europe in a time of hopeless despair, and in a guarded way suggested the possibility of private financial backing. Lloyd had taken his daughter into his confidence on the receipt of this letter and he had followed her advice.

There was much of the primitive woman in Ethel Lloyd. She did not rise to the heights of all-sacrificing love in her love for Allan. She loved him and she wanted him; she played accordingly. At the same time she knew that he did not love her. She felt that he cared more for her than any living woman, but she knew it was not love.

NO REPLY

She waited a few weeks longer for him to call, but he gave no sign that he was even alive. Then she wrote him a cordial note, saying that she knew he had returned, hoped that he would have called on them by this time, and asked him to come to see them.

There was no reply. She was at first shocked, then angry, and then amused. Then she ordered her father's private detective agency to find out positively if Allan was in Tunnel City and what he was doing there.

The report was that Allan was working every day in the tunnel. He lived in absolute seclusion and did not receive a single visitor of any sort or for any purpose. He could be reached only through O'Malley, and as O'Malley had orders that he was not to be reached at all, this was not much help. A spirit of adventure stirred in her. Allan had made up his mind not to see her. Very well—she would see him, in spite of himself.

From detectives she learned the hour when Allan was always to be found in the Administration Building—that is to say, he was there, but not to be found. She motored down to Tunnel City and timed her visit carefully so as to reach the Administration Building when Allan would certainly be in.

Dressed in a magnificent motoring costume, she presented herself before the impassive O'Malley. She had seen him at the time of Allan's trial and knew him by reputation, but he had never been presented. He, of course, knew her by sight, and when she came into his office he rose and bowed with the greatest courtesy.

"You are Mr. O'Malley?" she smiled sweetly upon him. "I am Ethel Lloyd. I feel that I know you—have known you for a long time." And she held out her hand.

O'Malley, who, though an Irishman, did not pride himself on his ease with women, mumbled some reply to the compliment and asked with some uneasiness:

"Is there anything I can do for you, Miss Lloyd?"

"Indeed, you can!" she assured him with a bubbling laugh. "I am very anxious to see Mr. Allan."

A FIB

O'Malley looked more uncomfortable than ever.

"I am very sorry, Miss Lloyd, but Mr. Allan is not here just now," he said.

The young woman expressed a surprise that was not all feigned.

"I think you must be mistaken, Mr. O'Malley. I had definite assurance that Mr. Allan would be here at this hour."

To Be Continued Monday.

But She Hadn't

"What's the matter, old chap? You look as if you hadn't had a wink of sleep all night."

"I haven't. You see my wife threatened never to speak to me again if I didn't come home last night before 10 o'clock, and I didn't."

"I see; you're finding out the lonesomeness of solitude because she kept her word, eh?"

"Not by a jugful. I wish she had."

Tongue-Tied.

"He invented a rippling story to tell his wife when he got home after midnight."

"Good one, was it?"

"A peach; it would satisfy any woman."

"Did it satisfy her?"

"It would 'ave, but he couldn't tell it."

Birds Instead of Hooks and Lines

FEATHERED FISHERS OF JAPAN

Al-Catching—Fishers with Cormorants at Work, Showing a Man Making a Bird Disgorge Its Catch—Reined Birds on the Water, and Brazier Which Lights the Work.

The fishing boats drift slowly down stream for eighteen or twenty miles, in the form of an open fine. As a rule, each boat possesses about fifteen or sixteen cormorants. These are controlled by means of reins attached to a small collar round the bird's neck, which serves the additional purpose of preventing all but the tiniest fish being swallowed outright. The man standing in the bows, and therefore deriving full benefit from the light of the brazier, has some twelve birds in his charge; while the less experienced man posted amidships usually controls four or five only. When a cormorant has completely filled its gullet, it naturally takes no further interest in the proceedings, and will then swim idly upon the surface. When this is observed, the unfortunate creature is promptly hauled on board, and by a gentl, but firm, pressure of the hand is forced to ignominiously disgorge its booty; whereupon it is thrown back to recommence its thankless task.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

"I hear that some people say that an awful, dreadful scream was heard when the wedding was downstairs. It must have been a dreadful scream. I was alone with that dead hand pointing at me. I was so much afraid that I got stiff and I did not know what I must do. All I think then was that I must go away and say nothing to somebody about the hand. For I knew I had no right in your room and if I got into trouble nobody in the house would help me out. But I was awful afraid because I got to step over that body if I got out of the window. When I was again in the hall I was fainting right by your door. But I didn't. I went downstairs, got out of the house and nobody saw me. And I ran all the way home and didn't say a word for a long time. And how that gentleman found out that I have seen the dead woman in your room——"

"That will do," quietly put in the detective. "You have heard the girl's story," he now declared, turning to Mrs. Cameron with a polite bow. "Are there any questions you would like to ask her?"

The great lady stirred, looked as if she had awakened from some terrible nightmare and murmured:

"She can be dismissed then."

"Yes."

In the interval but a word was uttered, not a look interchanged, between the lady and the detective. But the moment Mr. Cameron returned, a sudden change took place in Mrs. Cameron, and rising she confronted Mr. Gryce with a frank and grateful air that lent quite a new aspect to her ever-changing countenance.

"You are very kind," she declared, in a grateful tone that was in itself a shock to both her hearers. "Knowing (his frightful lies) seeing as you must have done that, if true, Mildred Farley did not die after I went downstairs, but before, you have come here confidence and without a word to hear what I have to say about the matter and give me an opportunity to explain myself. I shall never forget this consideration, sir; and as proof of my gratitude I will at once tell you what I can about this poor unfortunate's death, hoping that you will see the matter as I did, and understand in a measure at least how I was driven by my fears to keep back my knowledge of this frightful secret, even from my mother and husband, till it was torn from me shred by shred as you have seen. And now for the truth.

"This girl, whose death you consider such a mystery, committed suicide. She committed it in my presence, just a few minutes before I went down stairs to be married. It was a terrible shock and a great surprise to me. I had been dressing and was thinking of anything else than tragedies and death. Nor do I think she meant to do them or there. But she was desperate. She had had a talk with her intended husband and had been disappointed in him. She did not want to see him again, and the contrast between the hopes expressed by my bridal attire and the dreariness of her own outlook maddened her. I suppose for in a moment, as it were, the nightmare and memories of her own wrongs seized upon that bottle of poison and turned it up to her lips, and the deed was done and she was dead before I got over the terror which held me breathless and immovable at her side. I was in my bridal dress and veil, sir. The ceremony had already been delayed and I was momentarily expecting the summons to descend. Should I mar the happiness of the whole company by revealing what had occurred? I thought not in the moment I had to consider. So I just drew the poor girl into the alcove and in grief and terror enough, God knows, covered her over with some dresses I had before pulled down from the closet and thrown on the floor. I had barely done this and readjusted my veil when the knock came and I had to go.

"It was frightful, but I did not know how frightful till I came to think. Then I almost give way to my terror and agitation, and when that scream came down from upstairs——"

"And how," asked the detective, nothing but formal respect on his part, "was the body disposed of? When sent we hear of it, it was in the keeping of a Dr. Molesworth, who, as we have been informed, was not one of your wedding guests."

Mrs. Cameron did not flinch. She looked, if anything, more winning and candid than before.

"Dr. Molesworth was the man who had expected to marry her. He had gone to the hotel for that purpose and had not found her; so he came where he suspected her to be. He was not one of my guests, but that did not keep him from the house. He came in at the front door and stood in the hall, and I happened to see him and immediately knew what he was after. So I rose and went out—I was then receiving congratulations upon that bottle of poison, and turned it up to her lips, and the deed was done and she was dead before I got over the terror which held me breathless and immovable at her side. I was in my bridal dress and veil, sir. The ceremony had already been delayed and I was momentarily expecting the summons to descend. Cassidy Says Public Can Aid in Pure Good Fight

Mr. Cassidy has often told you of the dishonest practices of the food doper who palms off on an unsuspecting public cheap and inferior goods. Today he tells the housewives and the public where they are also at fault.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

I have often told you of the methods of the food adulterators and the part the middlemen have in making such adulteration possible through the successful sale of various articles.

I met a grocer friend of mine the other day and he said: "Cassidy, it is all right for you to condemn those various articles made to please the eye rather than the stomach, and I am heartily in favor of it. But what are we grocers and middlemen going to do about it?

"We put honest goods on our shelves, such as whole wheat, unpolished rice, pound cake unenlivened and ice cream made of true strawberries. The people won't buy these goods. They want a white wheat, a white polished rice, a pound cake colored artificially and a strawberry ice cream colored red artificially."

That grocer was talking pretty near the size. What can he or his fellows do when the public demands things which please the eye rather than the stomach?

How much is the public to blame for the demand for artificially colored and adulterated goods? Of course, the food fakers and cheaters were originally to blame. Through their advertising and insidious campaigns of education they must have created a demand for their goods.

But isn't it about time the public was waking up? Isn't it about time the public should demand unadorned and unadulterated goods? We have been hammering away day after day trying to awaken lively interest in the frauds, deceptions and cheats being practiced.

We have told you of doped soda water and have later gone out and proved it existed. We have told you of rotten eggs and showed you conclusively they were finding their way into your cakes and pies.

We have exposed the rotten conditions prevailing in candy manufacture, the use of soapstone, arsenic, shellac and other harmful ingredients.

Isn't it about time that you helped your grocer in keep honest goods by demanding honest goods? He is willing to give you pure food. All you have got to do is to show him he can sell you more pure food than he can poor fowl. In a great degree it's up to you.

Scores Join in Plea to Keep "Old Ironsides" Here

The AMERICAN received today many more letters and personal statements expressing the movement to prevent the frigate Constitution, affectionately named "old Ironsides," from being removed from Boston waters.

The movement has as its rallying cry: "Don't give up the ship!" the heroic words of James Lawrence. That Boston citizens will not give up "Old Ironsides" without a struggle is evident from the letters and interviews.

While the Charles River Basin has many advocates as a future home for "Old Ironsides," residents of South Boston declare that the waters about City Point should receive the historic vessel.

Men of the peninsula district gave the following interviews today:

Edward F. Barry, former president of South Boston Citizens' Association:

"An excellent idea and you can say for me that I will gladly work in conjunction with any of our residents in an effort to bring the famous old warship to South Boston. It would be an added attraction in the many we have at present and I would suggest as the location out beautiful stretch of water at City Point, where it would attract most of the visitors to our city, and would be a history lesson to our children."

Lesson in History.

Dr. Herbert J. Keenan, No. 254 West Broadway:

"I think it would be an excellent idea for the people of South Boston to make an effort to have the Constitution brought here. It would serve as a splendid lesson in history for our boys. Fort Point channel, near Federal street bridge, or at Castle Island, City Point, would be an appropriate place."

James E. Covency, secretary of South Boston Trade Association:

"I believe South Boston people would welcome the chance to bring the Constitution here. It would be a lesson to both old and young residents of our district and would attract many visitors to our district."

Ex-Governor John L. Bates:

"Boston will not allow the Constitution to be taken from our waters without a general protest. If the government needs the dock now rented, Boston will provide a place for her. Of that there is no doubt. We'll keep her here. Why, you might just as well ask us to forget the Boston tea party and the glorious memories wrapped in Old Ironsides' in the War of 1812 as to expect us to allow her to be taken away. It was a struggle to get her here and a struggle to get her back here where she was built, and we won't let her go."

Letters Make Protest.

Old Ironsides Editor, AMERICAN:

I am glad to see the AMERICAN take up the cause of the Constitution, and I hope there will be enough patriotism in Massachusetts to keep "Old Ironsides" in Boston. That noble relic of the days when our country was young and filled with the true spirit of a young nation should not be allowed to be taken away from the waters of its birth, nor from the scenes where it rendered gallant service for a budding nation. I would suggest that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts buy the old wharf known as the "Eastern Packet Pier," which, I understand, is to be given up as a fish landing place, and petition the Navy Department to let the Old Bay State take care of the greatest treasure of Colonial days.

The Constitution was built in Boston in 1797-1798, and should stay in Boston, and any one who will read about the part she played in the War of 1812 will say that she cannot be taken away from Boston. She has, also, the distinction of being the first vessel to carry the fifteen-starred and fifteen-striped banner to sea. Oliver Wendell Holmes' poem, "Old Ironsides," should be taken up and the good old ship will sing.

H. LEANDER DENTHAMONT,
No. 18 Pleasant street, Peabody.

Old Ironsides Editor, American:

I would suggest that the Constitution, if she could pass through the draws of the Boston & Maine bridges, should be moored in the Charles River Basin at a suitable distance from the embankment wall about half way from the dam to West Boston bridge. It would not be a very expensive job to dredge a berth with sufficient depth to float the old ship and prevent any straining or other damage from grounding. The ship would be secure from all known storms and a central point for visitors to view.

A. H. JORSELYN.

No. 157 Lexington street, East Boston.

Old Ironsides Editor, American:

As ideal resting place for the grand old frigate Constitution would be the Charles River Basin, right in the centre, between Harvard and West Boston bridges. It would fill the want for some notable attraction in the basin, and thousands of citizens who have never seen her, but know of her history, would be able to get a view of her.

THIN FOR YEARS---"GAINS 22 POUNDS IN 23 DAYS"

Remarkable Experience of F. Gagnon. Builds Up Weight Wonderfully.

"I was all run down to the very bottom," writes F. Gagnon. "I had to quit work. I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds in 26 days."

"Sargol has put 10 pounds on me in 14 days," states W. D. Roberts. "It has made me sleep well, enjoy what I ate and enabled me to work with interest and pleasure."

"I weighed 122 pounds when I commenced taking Sargol. After taking 20 days I weighed 134 pounds. Sargol is the most wonderful preparation for flesh building I have ever seen," declares D. Martin, and J. Meier adds: "For the past twenty years I have been meditating every day for indigestion and got thinner every year. I took Sargol for forty days and feel better than I have in the last twenty years. My weight has increased from 150 to 170 pounds."

When hundreds of men and women—and there are hundreds, with more coming every day—living in every nook and corner of this broad land, voluntarily testify to weight increases ranging all the way from 10 to 35 pounds, given them by Sargol, you must admit, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss This Reader, that there must be something in this Sargol method of flesh building after all.

Hadn't you better look into it, just as hundreds of others have done? Many thin folks say: "I'd give most anything to put on a little extra weight," but when someone suggests a way they exclaim: "Not a chance. Nothing will make me plump. I'm built to tweak." Until you have tried Sargol, you do not and cannot know that this is true.

Sargol has put pounds of healthy flesh on hundreds who doubted, and in spite of their doubts. You don't have to believe in Sargol to grow plump, you see. Just take it and watch weight pile up, hollows fill out, figure round out due to pleasing and normal proportions. You weigh more, look better when you begin and again when you finish and you let the scales tell the story.

Sargol is absolutely harmless. It is a tiny concentrated tablet. You take one with every meal. It mixes with the digestive juices for the purpose of separating all of its flesh producing ingredients, and the nourishment in these compounds is so easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily absorb and carry all over your body. Plump, well-developed persons don't need Sargol to produce this result. Their assimilative machinery performs its functions without aid. But thin folks' assimilative organs do not. This fatty portion of their food now goes to waste through their bodies like unburned coal through an open grate. A few days' test of Sargol in your case will surely prove whether or not this is true of you. Isn't it worth trying?

50c BOX FREE

To enable any thin reader, ten pounds or more underweight, to make this test we will give a 50c box of Sargol absolutely free, regardless of weight or how much you may wish, and the only way to know it is to try it. Beauty

Animation, Right Thinking and Eating as Aid to Natural Loveliness, Expertly Described by Mary Young

"THIS world is so full of a number of things" that—according to Mary Young—we ought not to set placidly by being "as happy as kings," but we ought to start boldly campaigning for a wide and general knowledge of the number of things there are to know and be. Almost any clever woman will tell you that beauty is brains, or charm; but not every clever woman can impress you with her personal willingness to study and strive toward the selfsame goal that she is indicating for you.

Now, Mary Young—late hard-working and dearly beloved leading woman of the Castle Square Stock Company in Boston, and present very natural and very charming heroine of "Believe Me, Xantippe," has never feared work, effort and the constant routine of study, rehearse, produce that marks the career of the stock actress. At present, with the unusually "simple life" marked by but six evening performances and two matinees a week, Mary Young is studying languages in order to improve every shining hour to the utmost.

"A little personal pulchritude plus a great deal of brains makes beauty that counts—while a vast amount of mere prettiness plus no cleverness, no accomplishments and no animating intelligence, may make a pretty picture, but it can never represent a glorious woman who is a lasting delight.

AN EXAMPLE!

"Last Spring I attended a dinner at which one of our great prima donnas was present. On one side of her sat a French diplomat and at her other hand was an Italian nobleman. First she would automatically chat with M'sieu—and then she would turn to the Signor and talk to him with charm and ease. Her animated cleverness fairly illuminated her beauty. Her brilliancy made her glowing, vital and dazzlingly lovely; while the less clever women, even if of greater actual beauty, faded and paled before this woman with the gift of tongues and keen interest and insight into humanity and national characteristics.

"I am using two hours of every morning to master French and German," added Miss Young with a whimsical smile. "Of course, I don't expect dazzling beauty to result—but I do confidently expect to gain in human insight through the ability to converse with men of other nations in their own language—and I expect a vast field of literature to open before me.

"Parlor tricks are a great asset to the girl who would be charming—a bit of recitation, an ability to play—if not Grieg, at least the music of the day—a gift of graceful dancing, or the charm of a sweet singing voice. Oh, the world is full of a number of things—and the girl who desires beauty must make sure that she has the setting for the jewel. If you are too lazy to take advantage of the chances of improvement that life offers, even if you have been dowered with good features—you will deprive them of animating soul and illuminating expression.

"My rules for beauty would, if I stopped to formulate and tabulate them, be three-fold, I think. Improve your mind, cultivate your natural gifts and discover a few unsuspected talents to polish in the first. Then, for rule two, BE SIMPLE AND NATURAL. That means be well-bred, too. For nothing less well-bred than the present fad for artificiality, for make-up unblushingly applied, and for bold and daringly immodest costumes could be conjured up in a Welsh rarebit dream. It is so hard to find the real human likableness of a woman who is hidden behind several layers of powder and paint. She looks cheap and middle class, if no worse, and so I feel that simplicity and naturalness are able lieutenants to Brains in the army that goes with flying banners to win Beauty.

RESERVE FORCE

"And the reserve force in woman's beauty-hunt is: Preserve a youthful, graceful, supple figure. Don't let fat accumulate. Fat is the white woman's burden. This is my method of fighting it: For breakfast I have a cup of black coffee and a piece of toast; for lunch—NOTHING; and dinner is a fairly simple, sweetless meal. It took me a year to learn to live a lunch-less life. At first I used to eat a few crackers to tide myself over the insistently hungry, aching void time, but at last I have learned not to miss the joys of lunching.

"Oh, everything worth while in all this world of numberless things seems to demand a struggle, but the need for your pains makes it all so 'worth the struggle,' doesn't it?" concluded Miss Young, with the dear little smile that like her very evident mental power illuminates her piquant, mobile romantic charm into a very worthwhile type of beauty.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

An amusing scene was recently enacted in a country court. The justice, a big, pompous official, with a voice like a trombone, took it upon himself to examine a witness, a little, withered old man, whose face was as red and wrinkled as smoked herring.

"What is your name?" asked the justice.

"Why," said the astonished witness, "you know my name as well as I know yours."

"Never you mind what I know," was the caution given with magisterial severity. "I ask the question in my official capacity, and you're bound to answer it under oath."

With a contemptuous snort the witness gave his name and the questioning proceeded.

"Where do you live?"

"Why," he continued, appealing to the laughing listeners, "I've lived in this town all my life, and so's he," pointing to the justice, "an' to hear him go on you'd think"—

"Silence!" thundered the irate magistrate. "Answer my question, or I'll fine you for contempt of court."

Alarmed by the threat, the witness named his place of residence, and the examination went on.

"What is your occupation?"

"Eh?"

"What do you do for a living?"

"Oh, git out. Just as if you don't know that I'm a gardener."

"As a private individual I do know it, but as the court I know nothing about it," said the presiding justice.

"Well," remarked the puzzled witness, "if you know somethin' outside the court room, and don't know nothing in it, you'd better get out and let somebody try this case that's got sense."

And the witness was fined for contempt.

LESSONS IN UNNATURAL HISTORY

BY DOROTHY DIX

THE PEACH is a cross between the apple that Eve ate and an American Beauty rose. It is compounded of equal parts of sugar and ginger, and possesses a flavor of which men never tire, from the cradle to the grave. Indeed, it is the favorite fruit of men, who spend so much money upon Peaches that they frequently have nothing left with which to buy meat and potatoes for family use. For Peaches are expensive. Very, and do much to account for the high cost of living.

The Peach is at its best when it is about eighteen years old, and served up with a garnish of French millinery, although some people, with simple tastes, prefer their Peaches au naturel.

Where the finest Peaches are raised is a matter of grave dispute among the best horticulturists. Some contend that none have the same sweetness as the common, or garden, variety that are grown in the country. Other connoisseurs aver that the hothouse ones, raised under glass, have a certain piquancy that the provincial ones lack. While still others are strong for the theory that to produce a perfect Peach you must transplant the rural species to the city while it is still a slip, and that by doing this you get the sweetness of the country and the grace of the town combined.

It Is Freaky

A strange peculiarity of this delectable fruit, however, is that it cannot be grown to order, and that it is freaky in choosing its habitat. For instance, many a Peach springs from a dingy and frowsy tenement, while millionaires spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in cultivating a seedling that turns out to be nothing but a little, hard, knotty, green fruit that they have to hire some mortgaged foreign aristocrat to take off of their hands.

In this connection two other peculiarities of this interesting fruit are to be noted. One is that the most attractive Peach always hangs highest on the tree, just beyond a man's reach. The other is that, for some unknown reason scientists have never been able to explain, no man ever wants the over-ripe Peach that is ready to drop into his mouth. This is why so many near-Peaches are left hanging on the parent bough.

In selecting Peaches two things are to be borne in mind. The first is always to pick out a Peach while it is still wet with the dew of early morning, as it is sweeter and fresher then than at any other time. The second is to get your Peach before the down and the blushes on its cheeks have been rubbed off by much handling.

Sometimes a Peach isn't as luscious as it looks, but owes its attractiveness to the pink mosquito netting with which it is covered, and when a man gets it home he finds that instead of being sweet and tender it is sour and hard; for, also, many a peacherino of courtship turns into the lemon of matrimony. There are microbes, however, in every situation in life, and a man has to be sport enough to buck his judgment in Peaches.

A Strange Fact

Strangely enough, women do not seem to care for Peaches unless they happen to be IT themselves. Otherwise they are very scornful of any particular Peach that their husbands, or any other man, admire, and point out its defects. "Huh," they cry, "can't you see that Peach is artificial, and that that blush is painted on its cheeks? I'd never be taken in by THAT." This explains why Peaches are seldom found at the family table.

Although, as has been said, Peaches are the favorite masculine fruit they do not agree well with many men, causing internal trouble and disagreement in the domestic regions. Also, they are very depleting to the pocketbook.

The Joy of a Bachelor Son

THEY were flustered and flurried, and looked, in spite of their white-lied faces and gray hairs, like so many little girls who had escaped from their nurses, and had not to make confessions of their griefs.

So great was the resemblance to little girls, it seemed incongruous when one lifted a grandchild to her lap and another adjusted her glasses and got out her knitting.

"This," said the one with the grandchild, "was brought to me last week. My daughter sent four children to me while she went on a trip. She said they would keep me from getting lonesome."

"I never have a moment's quiet," said the dear little smile that like her very evident mental power illuminates her piquant, mobile romantic charm into a very worthwhile type of beauty.

The little old woman looked wistfully at the little woman to grey. Some of them had bachelor sons to fuss over, and knew none of the feelings of a second honeymoon that comes to a little old woman in fluttering around and ministering to a son who never suggests nor rebukes nor interferes as long as he is made comfortable.

They sighed. It must be nice to have an easy-going son stand between a mother and her overly-solicitous daughters.

They sighed again. And the sigh grew in intensity and volume. It seemed the little old women like so many withered autumn leaves before a gust of wind, fluttering and whispering right out of the room.

And it was well. For, a moment later, the voices of many daughters arose on the air. "I wonder where Mother is so long. She is too old to stay away like this."

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl

The cutest little stateroom she ever saw

CHAPTER 28

ALTHOUGH Jennie told the young man she wasn't hungry, he insisted they go into the restaurant for a drink anyway. When they were inside the waiters all bowed to the young man with very much deference, and the head waiter escorted him to the best table in the place, near an open window and some palms, where they could look out on the ocean and at the same time be secluded from the rest of the diners.

From the way the head waiter acted you could tell the young man had been there before and was regarded as a very liberal customer, especially with his tips.

He asked Jennie if she wouldn't have something to drink, and when she mentioned lemonade, he said: "Oh, no, no—we must have a bottle of wine"; to which Jennie agreed, and, although she wasn't quite sure she liked it, it tickled her throat and she liked to watch the bubbles chase one another.

When the waiter was opening the bottle, Jennie could not help but think that that one bottle cost nearly as much as SHE WORKED A WHOLE WEEK FOR.

While they were drinking the wine Jennie told the young man she "just couldn't wait 'till she saw his yacht." So he called the waiter, paid for the wine, gave the waiter A DOLLAR tip—which quite startled Jennie—then they walked out on the wharf to where a small launch seemed to be waiting for the young man, with a man in sailor's uniform to run it.

As they "chug-chugged" out to the yacht Jennie marveled at such grandeur, and oh, how she WISHED she could live this way always.

She was even more surprised when they went aboard the yacht, for she never in all her life imagined anything so lovely. Everything finished in mahogany, leather cushions, and as they stood in the cabin Jennie could see through another door to the cutest little stateroom, that was all finished up in white and pink.

Should a Girl Kiss Her Cousin?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHE'S engaged and she has a good-looking cousin.

When she meets the good-looking cousin he kisses her, and when he leaves her he kisses her again. The fiance says the cousin has got to stop kissing his sweetheart or there will be trouble, and now the sweetheart writes me a letter to know what to about it.

"I like my cousin, and I don't want to hurt his feelings," says the girl who gets kissed; "but I love my sweetheart and don't want to make him really angry. Still I don't think he ought to be so jealous, do you—and isn't it all right for cousins to kiss? We have always done it in our family.

Well, now, little girl, just because you have always done a thing in your family is no reason at all why it is the right thing to do, is it?

And then your sweetheart doesn't belong to your family—and never will—you will belong to his family, and perhaps they don't kiss—in that circle—and cousins anyhow—and so you'll have to think it over and do what sweetheart wants you to do about the kissing.

Why not?

What is there so entrancing about kissing that cousin that you even hesitate a minute about turning down the plan in any way when you see him coming?

Still—your sweetheart's idea about it? Well, may be, and may be not; but anyhow, it is his idea, and why shouldn't you cease him in the matter?

What if he likes him and you keep on wearing pink—what if he likes cakes on and you insist in wearing veil. What if he likes poetry and you want him to read the millinery "ads"—do you think these things will tend to make him that much fonder of you?

Why not give up to him in this matter—it is, after all, unimportant to you and important to him—what's the use of making a fuss about it?

I know a woman and a man who divorced each other because the man played the guitar and the wife couldn't play his accompaniments on the piano. It didn't end with that, but it's how the whole trouble began. What a course that woman was not to play an old accompaniment for her husband—forget he wanted. What hurt could it have done her or any one else?

What's the difference, anyhow if you love the man you want to please him, don't you? Well, a wise woman told me once that the way to please a man was to give up to him in all the little things that don't count and hang on to your own way in all the big things that do count—he'll be willing to give up to you in them. Men don't mind big sacrifices. A man will give you a hundred dollars and quarrel over ten cents you spend on the grocery bill. That's the way men are made.

Why not make up your mind to take them as they are and not as you think they should be, and then, honestly, now, hasn't sweetheart a pretty cousin some where?

If he has just got her to come and see you, and every time Sweetheart kisses pretty cousin see how you feel about it. That may help you to understand Sweetheart's attitude a little better.

Remember you are used to cousins—you see in him just good old Dick, who taught you to skate and to swim—when he felt like it and you promised to make him enough fudge to pay for lessons; and he sees him as a gay deceiver. Maybe he is one too, even if he is your cousin.

And besides, little girl, kissing is out of fashion except among real sweethearts, didn't you know that? Ten years ago every time you had tea with a friend she kissed you when you came and kissed you when you went. The woman who tries to kiss a friend now except in really solemn times is looked upon as just the most little bit in bad form, didn't you know that?

Hand shaking has gone out, too, and waist squeezing. Girls, don't paw each other the way they used to. And cousins—well, cousins aren't nearly so much in relation to each other as they were when they were all liable to be brought up under the same roof. Keep cousin at a distance little girl, to please yourself as well as your Sweetheart. It won't do any harm and it may do a whole lot of good.

One reason why you should drink "Seal Brand Coffee" is because you will like it.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

The Boston market was more active than has been usual of late for a week-end session and prices ranged higher from the start. Trading in coppers was particularly good. With few exceptions issues finished with gains. Among those which had advanced the most at the close were Granby, 2¾; Alaska, 1¼; Butte & Superior, 1; Quincy, Superior and S. S. Smelting, 1 each. Some industrials were weak. United Shoe declined 2 and United Fruit ⅝. New Haven was a shade lower here and Boston Elevated closed 2 off.

The New York list averaged a little higher at the end, but the volume of transactions was small, totalling but a little more than 100,000. Coppers were strong as a group. Amalgamated finished ⅝ higher and others gains were fractionally larger. American Smelting, Chino ¾, Utah Copper 1 and Tennessee Copper 1½. Union Pacific, Steel, Reading, Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania & Ohio were among losses to show fractional gains. Canadian Pacific and Southern Pacific had declined a little. California Petroleum was a strong specialty during the morning.

The New York bank statement issued today was as follows: Average attendance: Excess cash reserve: $4,023,350, decrease $9,978,950; loans, increase $17,721,000; specie, decrease $2,744,000; legal tenders, decrease $1,328,000; net deposits, increase $9,931,000; circulation, decrease $749,000. Actual statement: Loans, decrease $10,157,000; specie, decrease $3,647,000; legal tenders, decrease $1,391,000; net deposits, decrease $16,695,000; reserve, decrease $457,750.

New Haven Sold Lower.

New Haven was a prominent feature of the New York Stock Exchange at the opening. It was closely watched because of the withdrawal of J. P. Morgan & Co. as fiscal agents for the road. This action had less effect upon the stock than had been expected before trading began. The loans opened at 80¾ for the loss of a point, then went to 90½. At the end of half an hour, however, it was selling at 91.

Nearly all the other issues were higher. Among early gains were Amalgamated Copper 2¼, American Car & Foundry ¾, Anaconda ¾, California Petroleum 1¾, Chicago, Rock & Ohio ¾, Steel common ¾, Union Pacific ¾, Southern Pacific ¾, Reading ¾, Northern Pacific ¾, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Great Northern preferred ¾. California Petroleum had made the best showing of them all.

The Curb was steady.

Vote on Tariff Next Week.

The Senate is progressing towards a vote on the tariff bill and now leaders think it will be taken early next week at the latest. President Wilson is satisfied with the situation. With Senator Newlands of Nevada in line, Democrats will have one majority in passing the measure, even with the two Louisiana Senators, who have firmly stood outside the fold on the question of free sugar, classified with Republicans.

When Newlands returned to Washington he announced he was going to be a "regular." He said: "I have never at any time contemplated making a fight outside the party councils against any feature of the tariff bill." As a matter of fact, Republicans never expected he would. Weeks ago, when it was seen the President was dominating Democrats in Congress, they had on hope of defeating tariff revision, nor of preventing the Democrats from doing it in a radical way. The new bill puts the country nearer free trade than many Democrats want it to be. But their political fortunes will be damaged if they do not follow the lead of the President, as by so doing to make a great fiscal experiment. Manufacturing interests are going to make the best of the situation. But they think it will fall in reducing the cost of living or in adding to the prosperity of the country.

Surtax Question Was Settled.

When the Democrats in Senate in caucus agreed to compromise on surtax rates in the income tax section of the tariff bill they cleared the way for the enactment of the latter. All is over but a speech by La Follette. Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia offered the amendment upon which agreement was reached. It read:

In addition to the income tax provided under this section there shall be levied as the additional tax of 1 per centum per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $50,000, and 2 per centum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $75,000, and 3 per centum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $75,000 and does not exceed $100,000, and 4 per centum per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $100,000 and does not exceed $250,000, and 5 per centum per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $250,000 and does not exceed $500,000, and 6 per centum per annum upon the amount by which the net income exceeds $500,000.

There are citizens of Massachusetts and other New England States who will be affected by the surtax, but it will be mostly collected in New York, which is the habitat of most multimillionaire citizens.

Financial News in Brief.

The London Stock Exchange was closed today because of a holiday.

F. L. Milliken & Co. have issued a circular giving high and low prices for August and dividends for September.

In the steel trade it is said that orders are being withheld until the tariff bill is passed. It is expected to cause prices cutting. Prices now average about $2 per ton lower than the middle of February and more than $3 per ton higher than the average for last year.

What Conductor Has Been Longest on Railroads?

Is it H. A. Titus?

Scores of names have been entered in the AMERICAN'S search for the oldest active conductor in New England. The contest closed today. The winner will be announced in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Prominent among the entrants is H. A. Titus of Milford, N. H. His "run" is on the Granite Division of the Boston & Maine between Ayer and Milford. Mr. Titus entered the service of the Boston & Maine in January, 1861, and about May 15, 1864, was promoted to a conductorship. His name is sent in by E. M. Manning of No. 15 Alden place, West Newton.

Other entrants are: Charles Richards of Somersworth, N. H.; Pierce Hoskins of Lunenburg; E. Dyer of North Cambridge, E. Moore of Waltham, S. French, Almeda J. Jaquith Fales, Henry G. Burnham of South Braintree, A. H. Brown of Cambridge, C. F. Dyer of Winchester, Emmons Garland and Jerry J. Goodwin, both of Portsmouth, N. H.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 6, 1913

The Boston American's Policy for Civic and Industrial Progress In Boston

FIRST, a greater Boston Port.

SECOND, the extension of more railroads to Boston.

THIRD, the establishment of new steamship lines in connection with this port.

FOURTH, the encouragement of new business enterprises.

FIFTH, a systematic plan for the development of Metropolitan Boston.

SIXTH, the improvement of the streets and transportation facilities.

SEVENTH, the promotion of education.

EIGHTH, sufficient and just laws regarding the manufacture and sale of foods.

NINTH, the establishment of permanent Grand Opera.

TENTH, the unremitting improvement of the AMERICAN, so that it may the better serve its constituents—the great reading public.

Home Coming Americans Are Delighted to Return from Europe DIRECT TO BOSTON, Now Ships Are Good as Best—Read What Cardinal O'Connell Says

The statement of Cardinal O'Connell upon his arrival in Boston is better than any editorial we can possibly write on the subject which the AMERICAN has often called to the attention of its readers—the opportunity and duty of our citizens to sail FROM BOSTON and to return from the old world DIRECTLY to Boston.

The AMERICAN quotes the Cardinal's statement:

It is really a delight to find that one now can come home from the continent DIRECT to Boston on board SUCH SPLENDID STEAMERS AS THE CLEVELAND. We had a delightful passage, and all of the officers of the ship were among the most courteous gentlemen I have ever traveled with.

It is indeed a great thing for Boston that the development of the port so splendidly begun HAS BROUGHT BOSTON SO PROMINENTLY BEFORE THE TRANSATLANTIC TRAVELING PUBLIC. We had many passengers on board who told us repeatedly during our voyage how delighted they were to feel that they were coming to America by way of Boston. THEY HAD NEVER THOUGHT OF BOSTON AS A PORT OF ENTRY, AND THEY WERE POSITIVELY DELIGHTED THAT THE NEW FACILITIES HAD ENABLED THEM TO COME THIS WAY.

I was delighted to hear on the other side that the North German Lloyd line is going to send steamers here. ALL THIS MEANS GREAT GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT AND PROGRESS FOR OUR BELOVED CITY.

For years our leading citizens have been in the habit of traveling to New York for the purpose of sailing to Europe. This unfortunate practice has taken away a great deal of business from New England and reduced the world's idea of our importance, for no one will rate us higher than we rate ourselves.

If the port of Boston is not big enough to sail from, it is not a world-port. If our own citizens do not believe it is big enough to sail from, it is no use for us to attempt to convince the world that we are a first-class port and metropolis.

The new spirit which has revitalized our energies and prompted us to be ourselves again as in the old days, when ships that cleared from Boston filled the harbors of the world, has found expression in this new movement to sail from Boston.

We have established a new line of European steamers, and the port directors contemplate the possibility of establishing still another line. We can easily support both the new lines and still others if we stop considering ourselves a province of New York and remember that we are almost a whole day's sailing nearer the great ports of Europe than is New York. Let us be as proud of saying, when in foreign parts, "I am a Bostonian," as the old Romans used to be proud to say, "I am a Roman citizen."

We cannot boast of our Bostonianism unless we acquire the habit of regarding Boston as self-sufficient. We wish New York and every other American city all the success and greatness in the world. But our home comes first. We want steamship lines running to our OWN port, catering to OUR OWN INTERESTS. We want our New England railroads serving New England and Boston first and CONTROLLED in New England and NOT in New York.

Murder No Crime in Connecticut When Done by Wholesale

Coroner Eli Mix of New Haven County, is paid by the taxpayers of that county to investigate murders and mysterious deaths, to bring to light the facts—NOT TO CONCEAL THEM.

But he boasts that, when it comes to railroad investigations, he has worked IN SECRET for eighteen years.

Nobody works in secret unless he have something to hide. What is it Coroner Mix has to hide? Why does Coroner Mix conceal from the newspapers of New York, Boston and Connecticut the testimony of the witnesses brought to him in a fleet of New Haven railroad motor cars?

In spite of a suggestion from Mr. Elliott, the new president of the New Haven, Coroner Mix refuses to act in an open, above-board and perfectly usual and natural way. He conceals the facts about the shameful killing of twenty-one men and women. Why?

C. C. Elwell is the chief engineer for the Public Service Commission of the State of Connecticut. He is paid by the State to supervise railroads in the public interest, and to insure publicity of their acts. He was formerly in the employ of the road. He, too, carries on an alleged investigation, privately, IN THE OFFICES OF THE ROAD. He, also, is busy concealing facts about twenty-one homicides. Why?

A. A. Alling is State Attorney for the State of Connecticut. He, also, is conducting an inquiry and ordering inquirers for information "to get away from here," even telling the Coroner to "shut up." He, also, is busy suppressing information about twenty-one violent deaths. Why?

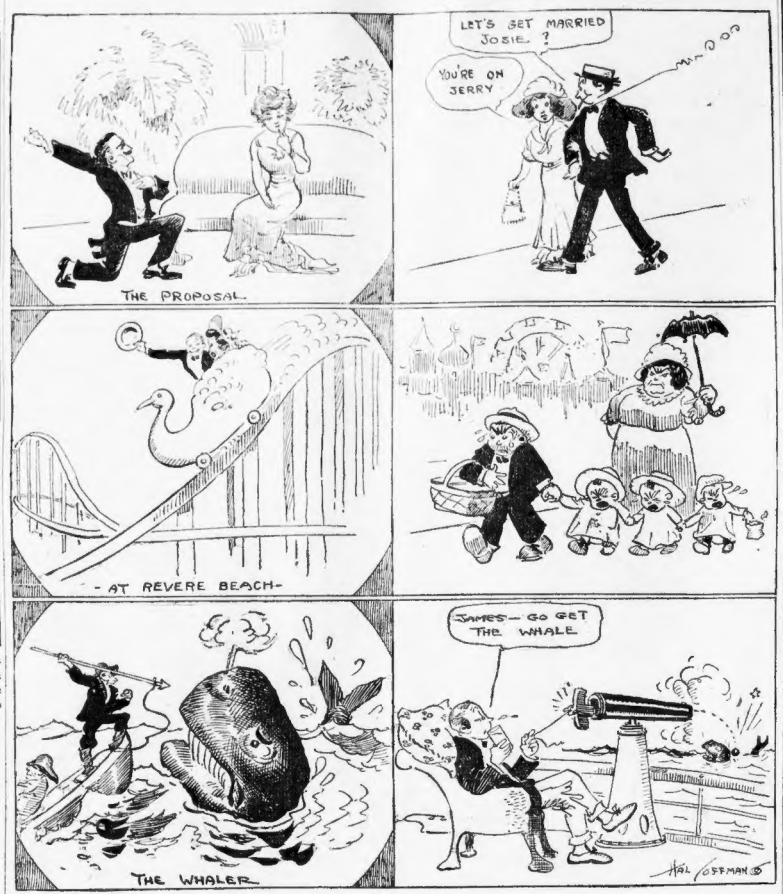
These things are happening in the State wherein, the interstate Commerce Commission officially reported, the New Haven Railroad once spent $100,000 "molding" legislative and other opinion in favor of its trolley line purchases.

Fortunately, this Commission has begun an open, public, above-board investigation. The sense of public duty which compels it to such action has not been blunted by constant contact with a public sentiment that has been "molded."

But, if an entire State government can be thus degraded, it is no wonder that petty, obscure State and county servants act as if they were the agents, not of the betrayed people, but of a criminal corporation.

The political fleas that have attached themselves to the New Haven dog are not likely to quit the source of their living for any number of shameful deaths unless the dog also dies.

In the Movies—In Real Life



One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THERE is an excitement about being loved. Many a girl has mistaken the emotion aroused by a man's devotion to her for love of him. Mary Danforth made no such mistake, but, so weary and spent was she that she experienced a feeling almost like pleasurable relief now that she was engaged to Herbert Fletcher. He had not asked her if she loved him, indeed told her frankly that he could not expect her to care for him at first, but that he hoped she would learn to do so later. Was she willing to trust herself to him? "I will be good to you, dear," he had pleaded.

She had told him that she appreciated how good he was, how kind, and that she would try to make him happy.

"Perhaps I may never love you as some girls say they love the men they marry," she had faltered. It hurt her to feel that she was accepting this man's devotion and giving nothing in return. She did not let herself think that she was taking a step down in marrying a man of different birth, breeding and traditions from hers.

"I'm satisfied!" he had declared stoutly. "I've known all along that you weren't happy, and perhaps you're about ready to have some one look after you. When I first saw you, Pearson told me that he'd heard in a kind of roundabout way that you were engaged, but I guess he was wrong, wasn't he?"

The girl flushed hotly. "Yes," she stammered, "he was mistaken—at least—there was a man I once knew to whom I might have been engaged if we had not changed our minds; but—no, I was never engaged."

The man looked at her pityingly and patted her hand.

"There! there!" he said soothingly, "I did not mean to embarrass you. I know you were free, dear girl, for no man would have let you work the way you've been doing. And I'm not asking you any questions, not even"—pausing and laughing awkwardly—"if you ever wish you had decided to marry that other man."

Mary looked at him calmly. Her face had grown pale again, and her manner was unflurried.

"You are not asking me any questions," she said in a firm voice, "but I want to tell you here and now that I would not marry that other man of whom you spoke—no, not if my life depended upon it."

She believed her own statement just as surely as she believed she had spoken the truth when she made a similar assertion to her mother early in the evening.

Mary Danforth did not tell her mother of her engagement to Herbert Fletcher until the night after she had accepted him. Then, the evening meal over, she made her announcement, using no subterfuges.

"Mother," she said gravely, "Mr. Fletcher asked me last night to marry him. I said I would."

The elderly woman held out her arms. "Come and kiss me, dear," she said. "You were right not to tell me of this until it was settled. And to think that it has been going on all these weeks, and I all the while thinking it was Craig that you cared for, and never suspecting that everything between you and him was over! You surely have kept your own counsel, child. But I am not a bit vexed with you, honey, for not telling me the truth. If you found you did not love Craig, you were right to tell him so, and to follow what your heart told you to do. All's well that ends well, you know."

"Yes, agreed the girl. "All's well that ends well."

Fletcher declared that he liked "the old lady" from the first. "She must live with us, of course," he said to Mary. "You will want her with you, won't you?"

"I could not marry any one who would not let her live with me," Mary replied quickly. "She is all I have."

So the matter of Mrs. Danforth's future was settled. When Mary told her of this conversation, tears of gratitude came to the widow's eyes.

"Think how anxious and unhappy I have been all these weeks!" she ejaculated in self-reproach. "We ought never to anticipate trouble, ought we? I used to wonder why you were so silent about Gordon and about his not writing—and all the time you were caring for Mr. Fletcher."

But here Mary checked her. "Mother," she said, "since our lives are to be entirely separated from the past months, suppose we try to forget them and talk of them no more." And the mother smilingly agreed.

Events transpired rapidly in the weeks that followed. Fletcher urged a speedy marriage.

"What's the good of waiting?" he insisted one day. "Here are you, Mary, working away down at Pearson's office, earning a mere pittance, and here am I earning enough for you and me too, not to mention your mother. I hate to seem to nag at you all the time, but we'll be no readier to get married a year from now that we are now."

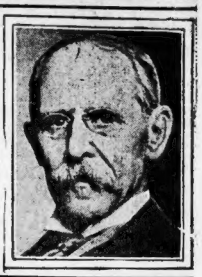
Mary scarcely understood why she put off the expected day. She had written to Craig that she would be married in three months. When she read his prompt and brief note of congratulation, she tore it into bits. But still she declined to name a date on which she would become Bert Fletcher's wife.

Then, one morning, glancing through the daily paper, she saw among the wedding announcements the notice of the marriage at San Antonio, Texas, of Gordon Craig and Eleanor Morse.

That night she said Herbert Fletcher that she would marry him in a fortnight. "I have no money to buy a trousseau with," she said bitterly, "so, as you always say, why wait any longer?"

Thus it came about that Mary Danforth and Herbert Fletcher were quietly married in June at the bride's tiny apartment. The only witnesses to the ceremony were Mrs. Danforth and the groom's mother.

MYSTERIES OF SCIENCE AND NATURE



Is Our Blood in Its Composition and Temperature the Counterpart of the Water of the Ocean, Whence, They Say, All Life Sprang?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SCIENCE boasts of its exactness, and properly so. Yet there is no speculator comparable in boldness with the man of science who is endowed at the same time with the scent for precision and the gift of imagination.

One of the most daring scientific speculations with which I am acquainted is that of a French physiologist, R. Quinton, who ventures to assert that the blood which flows in the veins of man and other animals derives its peculiar temperature (which hardly varies more than ten degrees in all the host of vertebrate, or back-boned, animals) and its peculiar composition (in which salt always plays a fixed part) from the primeval sea that enveloped the earth in those early ages when life was just beginning on our planet!

Take Out Corpuscles, He Says, and Our Blood Is Sea Water

Man, says this bold speculator in scientific asseta, is a kind of marine aquarium, filled with sea-water resembling that of the ancient ocean in which his lower animal ancestors bathed millions of years ago. We call this salty fluid, from which our living cells derive their vitality, "blood"; but deprive the blood of the red and white corpuscles which have developed in it, and all that is left is a "physiological salt solution," precisely like the salty water of the primeval sea, and retaining the same temperature.

In other words, the so-called vital fluid of animals is nothing but sea-water, less salty and hotter than the sea-water of today, but retaining the same composition and the same temperature that it had when, ages upon ages ago, the first living creatures of our world emerged from their original home, which was the ocean, and, with new bodies, henceforth sealed up, so that the fluid on which their lives depends cannot escape, crawled out upon the land, and gave rise, by gradual evolution, to the higher animals of the present time.

This ancient, life-giving sea-water has been handed on from generation to generation, for untold aeons of time, continuing to exist, age after age, in the veins of animals, forever the same in composition and temperature, notwithstanding the innumerable changes of form it has undergone in the ceaseless processes of generation, growth, decay, death and regeneration.

To see how this curious speculation has arisen, let us consider the fact that the first organism inhabiting the sea (long before there was dry land) were simple living cells of protoplasm, open in structure and bathed throughout in the warm, salty water which maintained their vitality. As the sea cooled, and became more salty through the influx of mineral substances washed down from the land, it was no longer a suitable abode for many of the progressing animal forms which had been built up by the combination of the original single cells, and these assumed the shape of closed bodies, in which the life-sustaining fluid was locked up, while its original temperature was maintained by physiological action.

Having emerged upon the land these creatures continued in the course of evolution, determined by their new surroundings, and assumed a greater variety of higher forms, constantly increasing in complexity or organization, but always retaining the secret of life derived from the sea in the form of a fluid, never varying much from a temperature of about 100 degrees, nor from a composition comprising about seven or eight parts salt to a thousand parts of water.

It is a strange fact that from the poles to the equator all vertebrate animals possess blood of nearly the same temperature and the same degree of saltness, and Quinton avers that this singular uniformity is due to the retention in their bodies, sealed up with membranes, of the ancestral composition of the universal fluid that, at the beginning, nourished the life of their remote predecessors in the sea. If this be so, then our blood is simply an image of the water of the first ocean, at the time when life was developed in it. If we did not possess it we could not continue to live. In a certain sense, then, we may be said still to live bathed internally by the life-giving fluid of the primeval sea.

Looked at in another way, according to Quinton's hypothesis, the blood of vertebrate animals gives geologists a clew to the temperature and composition of the first sea waters. We know that these have changed with the progress of time, the water becoming both saltier and colder, besides acquiring other ingredients which it did not possess originally.

Many Scientists Accept This Hypothesis in General

This strange hypothesis has met with a certain degree of approval from other investigators, whose criticisms of it relate to details but do not attack its general credibility. Thus Professor A. B. Macallum thinks that the blood of the vertebrates represents the sea water at a later period than that assumed by Quinton, but still a period millions of years back of our time, while Dr. A. C. Lane suggests that the blood temperature may have been raised by physiological processes above that of the sea when the aniamls left it.

EYES AND VOICES

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

EYES and voices of dead friends.
Come to me at night and cheer me,
And they seem so very near me
Ere my sleepless vigil ends.

Eyes that once exchanged with mine
Looks of fond regard and feeling
From the earth come softly stealing,
Once again with love to shine.

Voices stilled for many years—
Ah, but I can hear them plainly!
Voices that I longed for vainly,
They have broken from their biers.

Every eye a beacon light
Just beyond the shoals of sorrow,
Pointing out the grand tomorrow,
Every voice a soft delight.

Eyes and voices of dead friends
Come when Memory is complaining,
Sweetly soothing and sustaining,
Till the reign of darkness ends.
